A Loss to the Nation Demanded Much, Got Clubbed An Ancient Dread Watch, and See a Fight

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright 1930, King Features Synd., Inc.

SAD news for the nation yesterday when doctors announced that William Howard Taft cannot live long.

Mr. Taft was a kindly man, generous, tolerant, and a man of power.

There was great strength back of his friendly smile.

His life was a succession of honors, every one earned and well deserved.

Five hundred radicals, called "Reds," decided to parade in New York City, protesting against lack of employment.

Red signs across a building in Union sq., next door to Tammany Hall, calls upon workmen to get out and demonstrate.

Police gathered as the crowd was about to start and demonstrated SUCCESSFULLY.

Reporters say many heads were "thwacked;" also that 180 uniformed men and 25 plain clothes detectives had instructions to "hit at the feet, not at the head."

A police captain had instructed his men "not to pile up a list of hospital cases."

The paraders had no permit, and were, therefore, gathered illegally, as they started their parade about City Hall.

Banners read:

"Workers, fight or starve! Demand work or wages!"

"We refuse to starve."

"We say fight."

"We demand free rent for unemployed."

"We demand free food and clothing for our children."

"We demand unemployment insurance."

In this country we know nothing about the British "dole" for unemployed, and expect each man to shift for himself. The marchers were demanding a good deal.

However, it would be desirable in these cases to use the club as little as possible and "pile up hospital cases" as few as possible.

We are a wonderfully rich, prosperous nation.

Many of us cannot even imagine what it is to be hungry or worried about our children. But something can always happen, and it is possible to start something that you can't stop.

Signals to protect pedestrians from automobiles are to be installed in big cities and "amber-colored" lights were suggested. The police say: "Drivers will pay no attention to anything but RED. That makes them stop."

Why is it that red impresses men, even the lower animals? Is it because men, for forty million years, and animals, through hundreds of millions of years before men came, have known and inherited one great dread, the red blaze of a forest or prairie fire?

The Rev. Dr. Ryan, professor in the Catholic University of America, calls prohibition enforcement "Toryism," and says:

"The President is not the supreme arbiter of the moral duty of men."

The President, reading that, will perhaps murmur that under our system of government, Father Ryan is not "the supreme arbiter of the moral duty of men" either.

Prohibition promises to develop an interesting political fight. Watch, and wait, and you will see things not seen hitherto.

But do not believe that the prohibition amendment will be repealed. It will NOT.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., says, and every well informed man believes it, since Mr. Rockefeller tells the truth, that neither he nor his father caused the recent cut in crude oil prices. They learned of such cuts from newspapers. The elder Mr. Rockefeller does not pull any strings from "behind the scenes," but probably followed what goes on with mild interest.

Past 90 years of age—Mr. Rockefeller is interested in making money useful. He has sailed the ocean of millions for many years. A few dollar waves more or less make as little difference to him as salt water waves do to an old captain.

The president of the Pennsylvania, Gen. Atterbury, head of one of the greatest railroad systems in the world, says prohibition should be repealed, has not been a help to railroads, and has not affected men's discipline.

He includes "official corruption and youth in revolt" among prohibition evils.

SCOTT PLANS PROTEST ON DEFEAT

Briton Says He Was Fouled by Sharkey in the Miami "Battle of the Palms"

Miami, Feb. 28—Jack Sharkey's three-round victory over Phil Scott in their heavyweight bout last night will be formally protested by the English champion's manager, Jimmy Johnston.

Johnston declared his intention of filing official protest today after the Miami Boxing Commission unanimously upheld Referee Lou Magnolia's decision.

Louis MacReynolds, chairman of the Miami commission, indicated that no protest would be entertained by that body.

Both Scott and Johnston claim the fight was won on a foul blow delivered in the third round. A doctor who examined Scott before the fight resumed said there had been no foul, but two physicians who looked him over after the fight declared he had suffered a low blow which temporarily paralyzed his legs.

The disputed blow is said to have caused Scott so much suffering that it was necessary to administer morphine at 5 o'clock this morning to allow him sleep.

After breakfast, the English boxer went to a solarium for treatment of the [illegible] of the right sciatica nerve supposedly affected by the blow. He was able to walk.

Magnolia repeated his assertion that he saw no foul delivered by the Boston heavyweight. He issued a statement attacking Johnston for attempting to "put one over" on him.

Wife Swoons at Scott's Defeat

London, Feb. 28 (AP)—There was one house in England to which news of Phil Scott's defeat in Miami came as a nerve-wracking shock.

It was a little dwelling at Thornton Heath, where Mrs. Scott, in a pale blue dressing gown, sat anxiously waiting through the early morning hours by the embers of a dying fire for word from Miami. When finally the unwelcome tidings were received Mrs. Scott collapsed and was put to bed by friends who waited up with her.

A doctor was called and several hours later Mrs. Scott was better, although she was still abed unable to see visitors.

TAFT SMILES FAINTLY AS LIFE EBBS

Wife, Daughter and One Son at Bedside; Other, Speeding From Ohio, Due Tonight

Washington, Feb. 28—The physicians' bulletin on the condition of William Howard Taft today said: "The former chief justice is slightly weaker. He is able to take very little nourishment."

Dr. Francis Hagner said that when he entered the sick room, the afflicted man recognized him with a feeble flicker of the famous Taft smile. He was unable to speak, however, Dr. Hagner said.

Robert A. Taft, who had speeded from Cincinnati, reached his father's bedside just before noon. The other son, Charles P. Taft, was expected tonight.

Their mother and their sister, Mrs. Helen Taft Manning of Bryn Mawr, were constantly at the sick bed.

Outside a soft sun brought a hint of spring and the promise of flowers soon to blossom.

Justice Stone, a neighbor of the Tafts, drove up to the residence several times and finally left his secretary to keep watch with the newspapermen.

A uniformed policeman took his place in front of the Taft home, explaining his orders were to maintain silence in the vicinity. The officer had been at his post for only a brief period before Justice Sanford of the Supreme Court called to pay his respects.

George W. Wickersham, chairman of the National Law Enforcement Commission, who has been Taft's friend for years, also called, as did David S. Ingalls, assistant secretary of the navy.

It was believed the gale might last for several days.

Arrested for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon on members of the Garment Workers Union during a melee in St. Botolph st., Back Bay, today, Leonard Doherty of Emerald st., Medford, was held as a suspect in connection with a Canadian murder.

Declaring that he had been a waiter at the University Club and had never been arrested before, Doherty was found, according to the police, to have a string of aliases, with the charge of murder of his roommate lodged against him.

Inspectors James Claflin and Stanley Gay found a circular from Ottawa, Canada, signed by Chief Constable Charles M. Ross, stating a man answering Doherty's description is wanted for the brutal murder on April 30, 1925, of Charles Underwood.

On the circular the man wanted was named as Frank James, alias Fred Smith, alias Charles Leonard, alias Fred Ufert. It was charged that he "in a brutal manner with a breadknife, slashed and stabbed Underwood in the head, face and body." Underwood died shortly after.

The circular stated that in case

Grand Jury to Probe Alien 'Ring' Graft

The federal grand jury will launch an investigation of an alleged naturalization ring in Boston next Tuesday.

Summonses have been issued on order of Asst. U. S. Atty. Oscar U. Dionne to persons believed to have knowledge of conditions affecting aliens, who are said to have been preyed upon while preparing for citizenship examinations.

The grand jury probe is the outcome of an investigation begun several weeks ago by Henry E. Nichols, chief naturalization examiner in this district, during which a number of aliens presenting themselves for citizenship have been queried about advances made to them by men claiming to have influence.

As a result of the questioning of one applicant, the federal examiner was sued for $20,000 in Suffolk superior court for alleged forced detention, unnecessary grilling and threatened arrest.

Attorney Henry B. Harris, who, as counsel for Guiseppi Faliti, filed this suit against Nichols, later sued a Fitchburg man for allegedly defrauding another alien of $100 on a contract to procure citizenship papers.

Harris called this suit to Nichols' attention and offered his support in the investigation, and it is understood the attorney is one of those called as a witness at the grand jury probe.

TWO KILLED IN MILL BLAST

Deerfield, N. H., Feb. 28 (AP)—Henry Swain of Pittsfield and Charles Bailey of Northwood were killed here today in an explosion that wrecked a portable sawmill. Their bodies were mutilated.

Several other men employed at the mill and living in nearby camps narrowly escaped injury.

Swain was employed as a sawyer and Bailey as a fireman in charge of the mill boiler. That the death toll was not greater was due to the fact that certain other employes had not arrived for their day's work when the explosion occurred.

Although the exact cause of the accident was not determined, it was believed either low water or a sudden intake of cold water caused the boiler to explode.

Postman Robbed of $3000 Payroll

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 28 (AP)—Two men in an automobile held up a letter carrier at Rocky Hill six miles north of here, today, and escaped with a pouch containing a payroll of between $3000 and $4000.

MANY AGENTS ARE SHIFTED TO OTHER DISTRICTS

Former Chief Transferred to the Dry Law Field Force; Shakeup Was Expected

Washington, Feb. 28 (INS)—A thorough and far-reaching shakeup in the government's narcotic forces was announced at the Treasury today.

Col. L. G. Nutt, for many years the chief of the narcotic enforcement laws, was demoted and taken out of the division, being assigned as a field supervisor in the prohibition service.

Simultaneously it was announced that George W. Cunningham, the narcotic enforcement chief in New York, has been transferred to Nashville, Tenn., and will be succeeded in New York by Joseph A. Manning, who has been in charge in Nashville.

Many narcotic agents now on duty in New York will be transferred to other parts of the country.

Harry J. Amslinger, now a deputy prohibition commissioner, will succeed Col. Nutt as narcotics chief temporarily.

Today's shakeup was not unexpected. In fact, it has been widely anticipated ever since the New York grand jury recently returned a report censuring Col. Nutt's administration, and activities of his son, who is a New York narcotic agent.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman sought to soften the effect of the shakeup by stating today that Col. Nutt had been "an active and zealous officer, and it is felt that in his new post he will be able to render great service to the cause of law enforcement."

Brockway was also charged with operating without a license and so as to endanger the safety of the public.

They will be given a hearing next Thursday. Members of Lieut. Stephen J. Gillis' special headquarters service unit chased the boys through Roxbury, Jamaica Plain and West Roxbury before halting them after firing several shots.

Ask Hoover Recall U. S. Naval Envoys

Washington, Feb. 28 (AP)—The recall of the American delegation from the London naval arms conference was proposed in the Senate today by Senator McKellar, Democrat, Tennessee, who asserted that there was no opportunity for naval reductions.

The Tennessee senator insisted that "in the present state of mind of the conferees representing the other four powers, it is clear there is no possibility of disarmament or of a reduction of armaments, or even a limitation of armaments."

McKellar's suggestion started the first debate in the Senate on the London conference since it convened early in January.

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, replied to the Tennessean, saying:

"I sympathize with a great many things the Senator from Tennessee has said, but I believe he has given a premature American pronouncement, based upon inadequate and insufficient information. Such con-

26 Bostonians Try to Save Naval Parley

Twenty-six prominent Bostonians, men and women, were revealed today to have formed a committee "to save the London naval conference" by urging President Hoover to enmesh the United States in future European imbroglios.

All members of the Legislature, and hundreds of others, found circulars in their morning mail from this group which calls itself The Emergency Committee on the London Naval Conference.

Recipients of the circulars are asked to sign a petition to the President, to address the chief executive personally and to "get resolutions passed by all organizations and meetings, large or small, with which you are connected."

President Ada L. Comstock of Radcliffe college, President Daniel L. Marsh of B. U., Rabbi Harry Levi of Temple Israel, Mrs. Jennie Loitman Barron, former Boston School Committee member; Prof. Manley O. Hudson, a staunch League of Nations advocate, and Prof. Arthur N. Holcombe, both of Harvard, and Mrs. Colin W. MacDonald are among the signers of the "emergency committee's" circular.

The committee takes the stand that the London parley will be a failure unless the United States agrees to go into a huddle with European powers in event of a threat of war in the future.

"We therefore endorse the proposed strengthening of the Kellogg pact by providing for a conference of the signatory nations in case of a threat of war."

WHAT CIRCULAR SAYS

This is the one [illegible] embodied in a [illegible] drawn up for presentation to President Hoover after signatures have been obtained.

This is the "emergency committee" as disclosed by the circular:

Willis J. Abbot, Mrs. Jennie Loitman Barron, Lawrence G. Brooks, George W. Coleman, President Ada L. Comstock, Mrs. Frances G. Curtis, Mrs. Robert L. DeNormandie, Miss Zara DuPont.

Mrs. Martha Helen Elliott, Mrs. J. Malcolm Forbes, Mrs. J. Pennington Gardiner, Conrad Hobbs, Prof. Arthur N. Holcombe, Prof. Manley O. Hudson, Mrs. Roland G. Hopkins, Joseph Lee.

Rabbi Harry Levi, Mrs. Colin W. MacDonald, Mrs. Albert W. Levis, President Daniel L. Marsh, John F. Moors, Rev. George L. Paine, Mrs. Charles I. Quirk, Mrs. E. Tallmadge Root, Dr. Stephen Rushmore, Butler R. Wilson.

Under the heading, "The Emergency Committee on the London Naval Conference, 120 Boylston st.," the circular reads as follows:

"The success of the London Naval Conference hangs in the balance. The President needs your support at once in his efforts to reduce armament. Therefore, we are asking certain representative citizens, of whom you are one, to give their endorsement to the following memorial:

"'Mr. President: We have rejoiced in your great guarantee to the world that America would match every naval reduction, however great, offered by the other nations. Reports from London indicate that the solution of the difficulties facing the naval conference rests upon you.

"'We therefore endorse the proposed strengthening of the Kellogg pact by providing for a conference of the signatory nations in case of a threat of war.

SUPPORT PLEDGED

"'We pledge our heartfelt support to you in all your efforts to gain reduction as the outcome of the London conference. We believe the country demands the achievement of substantial reduction in all classes of ships and will feel vast disappointment unless the expectations raised by your noble utterances are realized.'

"We will send the memorial to the President with the names of all indorsers. We also expect to get press publicity upon this. Will you show your desire to support the President by signing the inclosed card and sending it by return mail?"

In a postscript the committee adds: "We further urge that you telegraph or write individually to the President, that you get resolutions passed by all organizations and meetings, large or small, with which you are connected, and that you prepare a petition and get signatures upon it."

U. S., Britain Move for Compromise With Japan

London, Feb. 28 (AP)—The American and Japanese delegations today continued active efforts to reach an agreement on the points of difference between them. It was understood the conversations were tending toward a compromise which might involve concessions by both sides.

Unofficial observers gathered the impression there was the possibility that the American and British concession might give Japan the right to retain a greater proportion of submarines in relation to the United States and Great Britain than is allowed under the ratio of the Washington treaty for capital ships.

At the same time, Great Britain and the United States would make a sharp cut in their tonnages for submersibles. On the other hand, Japan would be asked to reduce her demand for a 70 per cent cruiser ratio.

U. S. TO CUT SUBS.

It was pointed out the Japanese have steadfastly maintained that undersea craft formed an important part of their fleet and hence they might be willing to make concessions in other categories in order to get a desired strength in submarines.

The Americans and British have made it clear they have no desire for the Japanese delegation to return to Tokyo dissatisfied. Hence the recent conversations between Senator David A. Reed and Ambassador Matsudaira. Japan has been along lines [illegible] the whole field of both [illegible] and Japanese proposals in order to reach the most agreeable arrangement to each.

The impression prevailed at American headquarters that the Japanese negotiations would take considerable time, especially since the American and British total tonnages will be dependent on France's and no progress is being made in solving the French problem because of the absence of the French from the conference.

STRIVE FOR BIG 5 PACT

Ambassador Matsudaira visited Senator Reed this morning and they conferred briefly. At the same time Secretary Stimson conferred with Arthur Henderson, British Secretary of State, at the British foreign office.

Whatever may ultimately come in the way of an agreement, all the delegations have made it abundantly clear they are striving for a five-power arrangement.

Indeed, the British spokesman today averred that the conversations were proceeding satisfactorily in the direction of a five-power agreement.

He did not indicate, however, what sort of five-power agreement he had in mind, or whether it would fulfil the original purposes of the conference.

Guard Quells Disturbers With 13 Arrests; Election Plot Is Feared

Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, Feb. 28 (AP)—On the eve of the arrival of the Hoover commission, expected today, a fight developed in which a number of persons were injured and 13 arrests were made by the Garde.

A crowd estimated at 1500 assembled in front of the darkened Council of State building, inflamed by reports that the council was in secret session to re-elect President Borno, or to elect Minister De Jean or Charles Fombrun, whose appointment as a member of the council of state was revoked yesterday.

Assurances by Garde officers failed to disperse the crowd and a fight developed with knives and clubs. The Garde stabbed one man and another's hand was broken by a club. The crowd then dispersed rapidly and the city became quiet.

FEARED FIGHT OVER WILL

Bennington, Vt., Feb. 28—Evidence that Edward H. Everett, Bennington millionaire whose will is being contested in county court here, feared as far back as 1925, four years before his death, that the disposition of his property would be questioned, was introduced during the rebuttal proceedings of the proponents of the will.

Mr. Everett left almost all of his estate to his second wife, Grace Burnap Everett, and their two small daughters by a will made in 1927, now being contested by the three daughters of the first marriage, Mrs. Lucius A. Wing of Great Neck, L. I.; Mrs. Guilio Turri of Florence, Italy, and Mrs. James K. Selden of Andover, Mass., who are alleging undue influence.

The evidence introduced was a letter written by Mr. Everett to George H. Walker of W. A. Harriman & Co., Inc., of New York, on July 3, 1925.

Williams presented a check for $5400, certified by the Hopkinton National Bank at the institution here this morning and opened an account with it. Later in the day he withdrew $2000 by means of a check. Investigation showed that the Hopkinton bank had certified the check for $54.

Williams had engaged a suite of offices in the same building with the bank and had passed as a representative of a business concern.

BOARD OPENS INQUIRY INTO TAXI STANDS

10 Questions Are Propounded to Ascertain the System of Granting Parking Spaces

The special committee of Boston City Council appointed to investigate the taxi stand situation in Boston opened its meetings City Hall today.

Its first act was the passage of an order offered by its chairman, Robert G. Wilson, Jr., calling on Mayor James M. Curley to ask the corporation counsel 10 questions to determine by what authority parking spaces in Boston are rented to taxi companies.

At last week's meeting of the council, in calling for a real inquiry, Mr. Wilson said, "an unseen hand is at work which blocked two previous investigations by the Boston City Council and one by the Massachusetts Legislature."

The interrogations to be propounded are:

By virtue of what authority are taxicab locations now granted, with any rental or fee charged by any private owner or lessee of any building, on any public street in the city of Boston?

Assuming that consent is given by the owner or lessee of an adjacent building, is the proper legal authority for the granting of taxicab stand on a public street in the city of Boston legally vested at the present time in the Board of Street Commissioners or the Police Commissioner?

Has the Police Commissioner authority to grant a license for a taxicab stand on any public street in the city of Boston, and if so by virtue of what act of the Legislature or what city ordinance?

Has the Board of Street Commissioners authority to grant a license for a taxicab stand on any public street in the city of Boston, and if so by virtue of what act of the Legislature or what city ordinance?

By virtue of what city ordinance or what act of teh Legislature do the owners or lessees of hotel buildings in the City of Boston now receive rentals or fees for the use of adjacent city streets in the City of Boston?

In your opinion is the present practice of granting exclusive taxi stand locations on Boston streets, with rentals or fees paid private persons or corporations, legal; and if so by virtue of what statute or ordinance?

Is the present practical monopoly granted almost exclusively to two taxi cab concerns for stands on public streets in the Boston business district legal?

Has the owner of any hotel building or railway terminal in Boston, even with the consent of the police commissioner, any legal right to restrict

(a) The parking of any automobile on any part of any public street?

To grant any exclusive use of any part of any public way for parking purposes, even where a fee or rental is paid the owner of the property immediately adjacent?

By exactly what legal procedure is it possible to prevent?

The further renting of any part of any public street in the city of Boston by the owner or lessee of a building adjacent thereto?

The further granting of taxicab parking privileges on any part of any public street in the city of Boston exclusively to any person or company?

A continuation of the present practice now existing in Boston of allowing any corporation, other than the city of Boston, or any person, to receive any rental or fee, for theuse of any part of any public street?

Exactly what are the present legal provisions effective in the city of Boston with reference to the granting of a taxicab stand on any part of any public street?

By virtue of what authority has a taxicab stand been granted on that part of State st. immediately adjacent to the Custom House?

Ambassador Sackett Held 'Prisoner' for Week

Berlin, Feb. 28 (AP)—Before former Senator Frederic M. Sackett became duly recognized by President von Hindenburg as United States Ambassador Sackett, he had to live for a week as virtual prisoner at the Esplanade Hotel. A rigid diplomatic code prevented his and Mrs. Sackett's mixing in with other mortals outside the immediate embassy staff, the only exception being a reception to the American and German press.

Amb. Sackett

German diplomatic etiquette demands that a new ambassador must see nobody except the German foreign minister until he has been presented to the President.

In the case of Ambassador Sackett, who arrived February 5, Lincoln's Birthday was agreed upon as an auspicious day for the presidential reception. In the intervening week, Ambassador and Mrs. Sackett were not permitted to accept any invitations. With the recognition by President von Hindenburg, a regular avalanche of professional and social engagements descended upon the Sacketts.

Washington, Feb. 28 (INS)—The Snell resolution authorizing appointment of a presidential commission to study the question of drafting capital as well as man power in war time and minimizing war profits was placed on the House calendar today by the rules committee.

The action assures congressional consideration of the question for the first time since nationwide agitation "to take the profit out of war" sprang up in the wake of the World War.

The resolution, sponsored by Rep. Snell (R.) of New York, creats a commission of eight Senate and House members, four cabinet officers and five civilians to be named by the President. The commission would report to Congress in 1932.

son, Prof. Gilbert Murray and Camille Flammarion.

Dr. Prince is said to have uncovered more fraudulent claims to supernatural powers than any other man investigating in his field. For some months past he has been making a census of 10,000 picked persons from Who's Who, as to their experiences and observations.

The Boston society, under his leadership, has specialized on mental in preference to physical phenomenon. Dr. Prince said he has never obtained satisfactory proof of such physical phenomena as writing on slates or materialization.

He is convinced, however, of several types of supernormal mental phenomena, and also of telepathy. He added that certain persons who are popularly termed medium very rarely are able to produce results without any posible access to normal information.

With a professional medium, he said, he has never been able to get satisfactory results under conditions which scientifically to do the work. His work is done with private mediums or with the rare professional, almost impossible to find, who will submit to his conditions.

Dr. Prince is a handwriting expert, has been drilled in historical criticism, and is an experienced detective.

He believes in studying every new case as if it were the first, and is mixing caution with openmindedness. His business, he says, is to apply all his powers and expertness to the problem and to form on honest conclusion with the reasons therefore.

JURORS BLUSH AT LEG EXHIBIT

New York, Feb. 28—The shapely leg of Miss Winnifred Conahan, 26, distant cousin of Mary Pickford, was exhibit A in Supreme Court, as an embarrassed jury was called upon to inspect through a sheer silk stocking the evidence upon which the owner demanded $100,000 damages from Louis Sherry, Inc.

What the blushing jurors saw below the fringe of modish skirt was a blue black, jagged scar running four inches deep around the back of the leg, midway below the knee.

The injury, according to Miss Conahan, was received while she was strolling down Fifth ave., past Sherry's shop at 35th st. For some reason as yet unexplained, the plate glass window of the shop blew out, she charged, and a fragment of the glass inflicted the deep gash in her right leg.

Nantucket-Bound Ship Delayed 5 Days

Perseverance won today and with it the people of Nantucket are assured of fuel to warm their island for the rest of the winter.

For five days the little two-masted schooner Alice S. Wentworth has been trying to make the island with 300 tons of coke from this port. For the same five days the little craft has been driven back to the shelter of President Roads.

Sunday it was fog that sent Capt. J. D. Tilden scurrying back for safety. Monday another try ended in fog and Tuesday the rough seas spoiled another attempt.

Wednesday night Capt. Tilden nosed the craft out again only to get caught in a ground swell that forced him to call coast guard assistance.

Early today the Alice nosed out again and went on her way to Nantucket.

URGES CONGRESS CONDEMN RUSSIA FOR CRIMES ON RELIGIO

WOULD NEVER RECOGNIZE SOVIET

Hamilton Fish of New York Pleads That His Resolution Be Adopted

Washington, Feb. 28 (AP)—Accusing Communists in Russia of carrying out a systematic campaign to despoil churches and to exterminate religion, Rep. Hamilton Fish, Jr., Republican, New York, today asked support in the House for his resolution opposing the recognition of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Fish is a member of the House foreign affairs committee. He recently introduced a resolution which condemned "the persecution and outrages which have been inflicted upon the Christian and Jewish subjects of Soviet Russia.

WOULD AROUSE WORLD.

The resolution would "express the sense of the Congress" that recognition of the Soviet government was incompatible with the traditions and institutions of this country until religious persecution in that country had ceased.

The New Yorker said the attack of the Soviet government against the Russian church and clergy was not only against them and the people who desired religious worship "but against God and all who profess religious belief."

The purpose of his resolution, Fish said, was to arouse public opinion in the United States and to unite all nations in an effort to persuade the Soviet Government to revoke decrees "against the freedom of worship and the practice of religious belief."

RELENTLESS CAMPAIGN

Asserting that the Communist party in 1929 had begun a relentless campaign to uproot and destroy not only the orthodox Russian Church, but every semblance of religious belief among Jews, Catholics and Protestants, Fish said the persecution against men, women and children for "maintaining their faith in God has had no equal since the 30-years war."

He asserted he did not dispute the right of the Soviet to establish any form of government desired without interference from other nations, but said "when it comes to a question of the destruction of all churches and religious institutions and the execution, imprisonment and exile of priests the whole world stood aghast and rightly protests against such barbarities, and that sentiment should be proclaimed throughout every civilized country."

Soviet Persecution Protested by Germans

Berlin, Feb. 28 (AP) — The parliamentary faction of the National Christian Federation, joining protests against anti-religious activity in Soviet Russia, has filed an interpellation in the Reichstag asking the Government's attitude on the "suffering, distress, outlawry, persecution of Christians in Russia, the closing of churches and the public blasphemy of God by word and picture." The interpellation demands that the Government make a thorough investigation into these accusations.

Explore Mystery Room 2 Miles Underground

Carlsbad, N. M., Feb. 28 (AP)—Frank Ernest Nicholson, explorer, has seen a new underground world.

Surrounded by fantastic creations of cave marble and flowstone, perhaps unseen by man previously during the million or more years of their formation, and perhaps never before touched by light, Nicholson penetrated a previously unexplored room of the Carsbad Cavern.

It was the first bit of exploring of unknown places of the underunexplored labyrinth to be done by this New York explorer, financed by the New York Times, who with his party of 11 assistants hopes to find the end of the cavern.

Two parties previously had reached the entrance of this new room, but Nicholson was the first to penetrate to its interior.

The room is something over two miles underground from the entrance. A tunnel branches off to the right from the main corridor shortly before the "big room" is reached. This tunnel leads to the gorgeously arrayed "King's Palace," from which branches to the righ the "Green Room" and to the left the "Queen's Room."

From the "Queen's room" Nicholson made his way through an unpathed tunnel into the immense unexplored room.

He has visited most of the 23 miles of known parts of the cavern, which includes the "big room," in which a 15-story office building could be built without touching the ceiling, to famailiarize himself with the work done by previous exploring parties.

The party as an expedition, however, has not started concentrated work. Air currents are a major consideration with Nicholson in mapping out a program for directing his party. He will enter no tunnels whose ends are known, but will confine himself to unexplored places with distinct air currents and follow those rooms and tunnels if possible, to their ends.

ENTOMBED MEN SIGNAL 'ALIVE'

Pottsville, Pa., Feb. 28 (INS)—While fellow miners dub tirelessly at tons of coal and rock beneath which George Shadle and Elmer Evans, miners, were entombed in a fall at the West Bear Ridge colliery today, Shadle and Evans spurred rescue forces on with weak signals to indicate they still were alive.

Although the men were pinned deep in the mine deneath a great pile of debris and were helpless to extricate themselves, rescuers believed they would be able to reach the entombed men by nightfall.

Excited men, women and children huddled in the cold about the entrance to the mine as the rescue work progressed.

FIND DRUGS ON U. S. PRISONERS

Cleveland, Feb. 28 (INS)—Acting on a tip that drugs were being smuggled into the county jail here, federal agents raided the bastile today and seized six federal prisoners with quantities of morphine hidden in their clothing.

Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP)—"Crimeless Chicago in six months" was the slogan today of the secret committee of six.

The head of the secret committee said $1,000,000 might be necessary to insure success of the crime war and a drive to secure this amoutn will begin at once.

Hundreds of offers of aid from all parts of the country have poured into Col. Randolph's office. Many of these, he said, were from Canadian mounted police, college students, Texas Rangers and former sailors, marines and soldiers.

Attleboro, Feb. 28—Two Providence men who had a financial interest in the rum cargo of the Black Duck the night she was seized by a Coast Guard boat were sought today for the murder of Ray Hacking, government informer, "taken for a ride" Monday night.

They are Carlton O'Brien, 23, and Joseph McGinness, 28, both with records for liquor law violations. Warrants for their arrest on homicide charges are held by State Detective Francis W. Clemmey.

It is believed Hacking was slain because he was believed to have given information that led to the capture of the Black Duck and the killing of three of her crew.

Five other Government informers in the Rhode Island district are marked for death at the hands of the rum ring, police said they believed.

The slain man was buried from a Providence undertaking establishment this afternoon and detectives were present at the service.

Concern About Time Gets Walt 2 Months

Walter Britt of Ferrin st., Charlestown, won't need an alarm clock for the next two months. He's down at Deer Island, where oversleeping, even for sound sleepers, is a rarity. And thereby hangs a tale.

Walter appeared before the United States shipping commissioners, Wednesday, and got his papers in order to be a sailor, after which he went out looking for an alarm clock.

He found his clock in an express parcel, the police say, wrapped it up in his bundle of clothing and went for a stroll through the North End.

Special Officer Mark Madden of the Hanover st. station was also out strolling and met Walter.

"What," asked Special Officer Madden, "is in that bundle, Walt?"

"Underwear," said Walter. "Nice heavy underwear to keep Walter warm while he sails the briny deep."

"Strange," mused the officer, "it ticks. It seems to be full of ticks. And what else is in the bundle?"

"My razor," said Walter, "my nice sharp razor for Walter's whiskers."

And just at that instant the bells began to peal. A muffled peal, it must be admitted, but alarm clocks are built with clarion voices.

In Central Municipal Court, Walter objected that he he was signed up to sail to Galveston. The court regretted, but compromised on a sail down the harbor, where everybody is sure of being awakened at 5:30 o'clock each and every morning.

26N BIG YEAR FOR SKYWAYS AIR CO.

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

The annual meeting of the officers and directors of Skyways, Inc., operating planes at Boston Airport and Marston's Mills, Cape Cod, disclosed that the company is in a healthy condition, with business increasing, and signs pointing to the largest year ever enjoyed. Officers were elected for the ensuing twelve months, and the distributorship of the Kitty Hawk land biplane and Viking Flying Boat for five of the New England states was made public.

Every year about this time company officials get together, the meeting starting generally in the afternoon, and extending until the milk man comes with the day's supply of cow juice. This year was no exception, according to Johnny Haughey, who disclosed the appointments for the next year.

Crocker Snow will continue as president of the company. He hasn't hit the quarter century mark as yet, as far as years go, but there aren't many chaps any more shrewd. He knows his airplanes.

Then Olcott S. Payson, of Boston and Portland, of the Portland Payson's you know, was elevated from the board of directors, and made vice-president, also continuing as a director. John D. Haughey, or Johnny as we call him, gets his hands on the dough, having been made treasurer, and that means that the shekels of Skyways will be well taken care of, for Johnny has been around aviation long enough to know how easy it is to spend dough in unwise investments.

Frank Hartley continues as clerk, and that rounds out the officers.

On the board of directors are L. Sherman Adams, also vice-president and a member of the board of directors of the Bellanca Aircraft Corp., of Newcastle, Del.; Zenas Crocker, Jr., president of the Cape Cod Airport Corp., in Marston's Mills, from which Skyways operate their resident flying school; Robert E. Gross, president of Viking Flying Boat Co., of New Haven; John D. Haughey, treasurer of Skyways; Steven Paine, of Paine-Webber Co.; Olcott S. Payson, vice-president of Skyways; Phillips M. Payson, president Portland Airport Corp.; Crocker Snow, prexy of Skyways and Lester Watson, of Hayden-Stone Company.

The Viking Flying Boat appointed Skyways New England distributors of the boat and the Kitty Hawk land plane, for all states except Connecticut, and the first of a fleet of six Kitty Hawks was flown here from the factory in New Haven by Reg Thomas, vice-president and general manager. Thomas was formerly in the Navy aviation flying at Squantum, where he was executive officer and later commanding officer.

Thomas barged in with the little bus, and that was an immediate signal for the Skyways boys to turn the ship inside out. Snow gave a very nice exhibition of stunt flying with the ship, slow-rolling it, flying it on it's back, barrel rolling upwards, looking, spinning, and what did you bring? Charlie Emerson, chief pilot of the outfit, test-hopped the ship after Snow came down, and was pleased with its performance.

Designed as a three place open cockpit biplane, and powered with a 100 horsepower Kinner engine, the ship is a wonder in performance. The cockpits are arranged in conventional manner, pilot in rear and space for two passengers directly in front, and gives good visibility at all times.

Five more Kitty Hawks will be delivered the first of nex tweek, and if Haughey and Snow can corral five pilots with formation flying experience, for the morning, the quintet of ships will come up from Yale city in close "V" formation.

Because the New Hampshire Aviation Corp., Bob Fogg's outfit, at Concord, N. H., sold a Travel Air powered with a Wright J-6 seven-motor of 225 h. p. Frank LeMan had to jump down to New York to collect the ship. Frank told us an amusing story. He called the weather man at midnight to be sure of the forecast, and said W. M. told him the storm would prevent any flying to Boston. So Frank hopped a train to Bean Town, having an engagement up here that had to be attended to.

Upon arising, and leaving the train, he found the sky clear as a bell, without a sign of a cloud. A call to the airport told him that Russell Boardman was going to Gotham, so Frank leaped to the airport, climbed in with Boardman, and a little over four hours later, was back with the new Travel Air.

Horton Chadler, connected with Bob Fogg's outfit, came down to look at the new ship in a Wright J-6 Seven Waco, so Fred Ames, president of East Coast, suggested that a race between the ships should be in order. A wooden prop on the Waco, which cuts down the speed, made the race seem too one-sided, so both boys swapped airplanes and flew around trying them out.

Stays on Job

Crocker Snow will continue as president of Skyways, Inc., it was announced at annual meeting of officers and directors of the flying company.

WARNS USERS OF SLEEPING POWDERS

By WINIFRED BLACK
Universal Service

San Francisco, Feb. 28—"Dope is dope, no matter what name you call it.

"And anything that puts you to sleep is dope, whether it is made of opium or not."

That's what a well known and highly respected doctor says every time he gets a chance.

Many women who would be horrified to be called "dope addicts" are slaves to sleeping powders, but sleeping powders, though mild in themselves, some times lead right straight to plain "dope" and the "dope" habit.

Some of these sleeping powders are not made from morphia, they are made from coal tar products, but if you are not very careful you may find yourself taking any one of the 99 separate and distinct derivatives of morphia.

These derivatives are known by dealers as "estes."

An "estes" may have a Latin name or a French name or an English name.

It may come in pills, it may come as a powder, it may come as liquid, but it is all morphine just the same, the same old doping, drugging, misery-dealing, slave-making morphia with a little acid, or some harmless ingredient of some sort added for a mask.

Nice little plan of the dope ring to slip through the guards of the custom house and the United States regulations, isn't it?

Cocaine sniffers are nervous wrecks, they walk with a peculiar jumping step. That is why "snow birds" are often called "leapers" in the underworld.

Cocaine makes the heart beat fast, brightens the eyes, quickens the mind, and tunes every nerve in the body to high C.

But when the effects wear off, the "leaper" does not leap. He creeps and stumbles, the bright fires in his eyes turn to ashes and if he is not carefully watched, he may try to kill himself.

Experience has shown heroin to be the worst drug in the market except marijuana, and competent physicians have entirely stopped the use of heroin.

The use of cocaine has been practically stopped by the best physicians and dentists.

Marijuana is the worst "dope" of all and the newest and the easiest to get, and it is the most terrible in its effects.

WAR HERO RAPS PACIFIST PLEA OVER RADIO

Washington, Feb. 28—"The time has more than come when we should cease being led around by our fellow citizens whose ignorance or abhorrence of the facts of the world of today, make their guidance dangerous to the country and those principles for which it stands."

Such was the ringing challenge to pacifists sounded by Brig.-Gen. Henry J. Reilly, veteran of the Rainbow Division and distinguished authority on national defense, in a radio address here.

Gen. Reilly was the principal speaker at the first of a series of notable broadcasts sponsored by the Daughters of the American Revolution, with the hope of stimulating a reawakened patriotic thought throughout the nation. He was introduced by Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general of that millitant organization.

Ridding the specious arguments invariably advanced by pacifists, Gen. Reilly proved that the actual cost of maintaining an adequate navy is not out of proportion to other governmental expenditures.

Pointing to the favorite complaint that the Government spends more on the army and navy than it does for education, Gen. Reilly pointed out that under the Constitution the Government is required to provide for such defense, while education is reserved to the states.

Thus in 1929, $2,259,000,000 in public moneys was spent for education as against only one-fourth that amount for the national defense, he pointed out, citing figures of the national industrial conference board.

The argument that the cost of maintaining armaments has mounted mightily in recent years likewise was shattered. Expenditures for national defense have increased only 52 per cent since 1913, as against an increase of 164 per cent in the total cost of Government.

"Stating it in dollars," he said, "our military expenses have increased $200,000,000, while our governmental expenses for other purposes have increased by $7,000,000,000, or 35 times as much."

DECLARES OIL LOBBYISTS HAD $50,000 FUND

Washington, Feb. 28 (INS)—Fifty thousand dollars was raised among Oklahoma oil producers to lobby in Washington for a tariff on oil, Wirt Franklin, Ardmore, Okla., president of the Independent Oil Producers Association, told the Senate lobby committee today.

The records of the association were dramatically seized in a raid here.

Franklin told the committee bluntly that he had been interviewing members of both houses in their offices and in the cloak room and asking them to vote for the proposed tariff on oil.

"What senators have you seen in this regard," asked Senator Caraway (D.), committee chairman.

"Senators Walsh of Montana, Watson of Indiana, Robinson of Indiana, Grundy of Pennsylvania, Pine and Thomas of Oklahoma, Ashurst of Arizona, Shortridge of California, Waterman of Colorado, Walcott of Connecticut, and Townsend of Delaware," said Franklin. "I've also seen Borah of Idaho, Deneen of Illinois, Brookhart of Iowa, Capper of Kansas, Allen of Kansas, Gouldsborough of Maryland, and I have met Pat Harrison but have not talked to him yet.

"I talked with Senator Howell in a committee with four or five other senators and I have also talked with Senators Kean, Baird, Frazier, Nye and Steiwer."

He said $50,000 was raised in Oklahoma to his knowledge before he came to Washington.

"That is all I know about it, but I believe the committee can get a certified statement from our officers at Ardmore."

He testified the daily expenses of their office here ran about $200 a day. He said he personally did not know of any other employes aside from five stenographers used to put out publicity.

Franklin told the committee President Hoover listened to a delegation of 12 oil men as they presented their case to him for an hour, and later he was invited to have lunch with the President, who wanted to learn more about the oil problem.

Battle on Oil Tariff Breaks Out in Senate

Washington, Feb. 28 (INS)—The Senate today staged a legislative battle over the Southwest's demand for tariff protection on crude oil, gasoline and other petroleum products.

The Democratic-Insurgent coalition, fresh from a victory over a newly organized lumber-oil-and-sugar alliance, declared war against the proposed oil tariff. Senator Norris (R.) of Nebraska, its leader, said the coalition was fighting the tariff because of its tendency to increase the price of oil and gasoline.

The coalition was riding high in the saddle in the Senate as a result of an initial victory over the tripartite alliance on the lumber schedule. By charging "log rolling" and launching an immediate inquiry into an alleged oil lobby, the coalition shattered the ranks of the alliance and forced rejection of a duty on lumber. Then the coalition turned its effort to beating oil tariff.

Senator Thomas (D.) of Oklahoma, led the fight for the oil tariff. He proposed a duty of $1 a barrel on crude oil and a 50 per cent ad valorem rate on gasoline. He said the latter rate equalled three cents a gallon.

He defended the protection as necessary to protect the "little fellows."

"How are you going to benefit the small producer through a tariff?" inquired Senator Borah (R.) of Idaho, "when the whole oil proposition is controlled by a few great companies?"

Thomas replied the "little fellows" first proposed the tariff because it would tend to keep out some of the 109,000,000 barrels of oil imported annually. With some of the imports barred, Thomas said, there would be a greater market for American oil.

He urged the "foolishness" of the empire nations buying from foreign sources much more than they bought and sold among themselves.

Murder Suspect Is Seized in Strike Row

of arrest the man would feign lameness of one leg, a procedure which the police say Doherty adopted when he was taken into custody in St. Botolph st.

At City hospital it was found that he had sustained only a bruise and the man was then taken to headquarters, together with a piece of gas pipe, with an elbow on one end, tightly wrapped in paper.

Doherty told Chief Inspector Ainsley C. Armstrong he was taking a peaceful stroll when six men jumped on him and attacked him. In the fracas, he said, he picked up something someone else dropped and it was discovered to be the piece of gas pipe.

Doherty insisted he was a law-abiding citizen.

Doherty, confronted with his record, denied he was the man wanted, insisting he had never been in Canada.

DENIES FINGERPRINTS

Questioned by Supt. Michael H. Crowley, he declared the fingerprints and photographs were not his. In his possession was found a note to a Mr. Fisher, asking that the bearer be given a bed for the night. It was signed by "Patrolman Denehan, Shield No. 1444-S." Doherty said it was given him by a New York policeman who sent him to a welfare worker.

Chief Inspector Armstrong sent a telegram to the Ottawa officials stating that Doherty's fingerprints and photographs checked perfectly with those of the man wanted for murder, and that he would be held as a fugitive of justice.

The prisoner was then turned over to Capt. John M. Anderson of Division 16, who booked him as a fugitive.

The police questioned Doherty's mother in Emerald st., Medford, who told them her son was in New York seeking work. She was not informed that he had been arrested.

The battle which resulted in his arrest occurred on St. Botolph st., near Garrison st., at a time when conditions in the garment manufacturing district were peaceful for the first time in weeks.

Five girl garment workers, being escorted to work by guards, fled shrieking, and a large crowd of girl students excitedly watched the struggle until police from the Back Bay station arrived.

According to the police, Doherty wielded an iron pipe, wrapped in a newspaper, on Joseph Weiner, Morris Rickerar and Philip Kramer, garment workers' guards.

The three guards, with the five girls, had just left the Hotel Garrison, on Garrison st., and walked to St. Botolph st. to get a taxi cab.

Police say Doherty and two other men approached them and after a few words Doherty swung the pipe on the guards. The girls fled screaming back to the hotel, while the men battled in the street.

Girl students and stenographers on their way to work halted to watch the melee until the street was blocked and a riot call sent in to Station 16.

Sergt. John P. Maune and Patrolmen Melanson and McCormick were first on the scene. They pushed their way into the crowd and Doherty and his companions fled. The officers gave chase, Doherty fell and was captured and was taken to the hospital where he was placed under arrest. Weiner, Rickerar and Kramer were roughly handled and exhibited bruises, but did not require medical treatment. They rounded up the five girls and took them to work.

A short time after this disturbance an outbreak occurred in front of the garment workers' headquarters in Lagrange st. A crowd gathered and the police of Division 4 were notified, but the excitement was over when the oficers arrived.

Fannie Oak, of Woodrow ave., Dorchester, who with a number of others is alleged to have entered the factory of the Boston Dress Co., in Beach st., on Feb. 25, was picked up in Kneeland st., and charged with intimidation.

A crowd followed the woman as she was taken to the Lagrange st. station by Patrolman Ray Monahan. During the excitement a man who gave his name as Joseph Clark, 36, of Hampton st., Chelsea, was injured in the face. He told police at Station 4 that he fell down, but spectators declared he was assaulted. He was taken to City hospital with a cut under the left eye.

The woman prisoner, after being booked, was taken to the courthouse and arraigned on a charge of intimidation. She pleaded not guilty and her case was continued to March 4.

Arthur Levenson, of Dwight st., South End, and Albert Porrino of Allen st., West End, were arrested in the courthouse on the same charge, police claiming they were in the party which invaded the garment factory. Their cases were continued to March 8. Other arrests are to be made in connection with the same case.

Elizabeth Donnelly, a widely known Communist agitator, was among the nine persons arrested by police of the Lagrange street station on Kneeland st. in connection with the strike of the Needle Trades' Workers Industrial Union.

In Municipal Court today before Judge Bolster, Miss Donnelly and the others arrested at the same time were arraigned on charges of obstructing the highway. They pleaded not guilty and their cases were continued to March 4.

Judge Bolster asked Atty. George Alpert if his clients would stay away from the garment manufacturing district. Alpert answered they had the right of peaceful picketing but would agree to abide by the laws.

PAYROLL THEFT FOILED BY NUN

Detroit, Feb. 28 (AP)—Providence hospital's payroll was safe in its strong box today because Sister Rosario, the cashier, had a "premonition."

It was the sister's premonition which resulted in a postponement of payday and this postponement foiled a holdup attempted by the same robber who two weeks ago escaped with $5,000 which was being distributed to employes.

Sister Rosario said the man accosted her in a tunnel leading from the hospital to the nurses' home and demanded money. He backed up his demand with a pistol.

The sister said she told him payday had been postponed. She pointed to the empty cash drawer as confirmation, and the robber fled after looking in the drawer.

GERMANS BACK YOUNG PLAN ON REPARATIONS

Berlin, Feb. 28 (AP)—Joint committees of the Reichstag today approved the Young reparations plan, formally recommending its acceptance by the Reichstag.

The joint committees also approved the agreement on American reparations and the hotly-contested Polish separate [illegible] agreement. The Young plan bills will reach the Reichstag for their second reading March 6.

The expected split-up of the coalition parties over the Young plan was tided over when joint committees of the Social Democrats, Democrats and People's Party, with 29 votes, voted for the Young plan. The Nationalists, Communists, Economic Party and Christian Nationalists with 23 votes were in opposition.

Those abstaining were the Centrists and the Bavarian People's Party, who insisted that the financial bills should be disposed of before the Young plan.

Her friends placed her in a chair and for a while she talked with Mrs. Grace, who told her of cures which had been effected through prayer.

As Mrs. [illegible] faith increased, Mrs. Grace relinquished her hand and she commenced to walk unassisted.

PLANES BIG AID TO ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION

By SIR DOUGLAS MAWSON
Commander of the British, Australian and New Zealand Antarctic Research Expedition

(Copyright, 1930, on the North American Continent by the New York American, Inc. World Copyright Reserved for Sir Douglas Mawson. Radio Via London.)

S. S. Discovery, Antarctica, Feb. 22 (Delayed)—By flights over the eastern portion of Kerguelen Island, Aviators Campbell and Douglas have been able greatly to assist in delineating the inland features of the island and certain vaguely defined portions of its coastline.

They have at all times shown great skill in handling our plane and are most helpful in many departments of our work. Photographer Hurley made several flights with them, obtaining aerial pictures of the mountains and waterways of the island's extraordinarily interesting topography.

In connection with the scientific work, several distant excursions have been conducted by motorboat, on all of which large additions to our biological samples have been effected. So great are these, in fact, that Prof. Johnston and his staff have been working from dawn to dark accumulating a splendid record of the life of this region.

We have visited three land stations of the British transit Venus expedition of 1874, now of historic interest. But little now remains of their occupation.

We also visited the ruins of the hut erected on Kerguelen Island by the German Gauss Antarctic expedition. The section on this island was then led by Prof. Drygalski. Their building is now derelict and uninhabitable.

Nearly on the site of the former German magnetic observatory, Professor Simmers redetermined the magnetic elements for comparison with the values ascertained 29 years ago.

The discovery's engine has been overhauled and our coaling completed, and yesterday we weighed anchor at Jeanne D'Arc and picked up our scientific party at Observatory Bay, where they had been encamped for several days investigating the little-known Karlluvken Fjord.

The ship just arrived at its Murry Island anchorage after a busy day trawling and charting dangers to shipping on the way down from Observatory Bay.

The health of the party has been remarkably good throughout the expedition, allowing Dr. Ingram more time for bacteriology and other work, in which he assisted whole-heartedly. In fact, he has been one of the most popular and helpful members of the party.

He was a native of Peterboro, N. H. He was city solicitor of Manchester, N. H., three years. He came to Clinton in 1878 and eight years later was elected to the Massachusetts Legislature in 1886 and was four times re-elected.

CONFESSIONS OF PALS FREE TWO YOUTHS

New Bedford, Feb. 28 — Two youths serving sentences in Concord Reformatory were released today as a result of the confessions of two others, one of them a brother of one of the prisoners.

The two prisoners, James Finan, 21, and Thomas F. Brown, 19, sentenced for robbery, were brought to local court on writs of habeas corpus, and granted a new trial by Judge Foster.

It is understood that as a result of the stories told by Hubert Finan, 19, brother of James, and Edward Bedard, 18, indictment against the original defendants will be nol prossed and they will be freed.

The two prisoners, James Finan, 21, brother of Hubert, and Thomas F. Brown, 19, who were identified by Joseph Froment of this city as two of the men who attacked and robbed him January 4, will be brought here from Concord to face the court at the same time.

They were sentenced to the reformatory by Judge Fosdick, at New Bedford, on February 18, together with Frank S. Domanski, 18. All five young men live in Pawtucket, R. I.

Froment was waylaid and robbed after he had returned here from Pawtucket. It was said that while in Pawtucket, Froment saw all five youths and that his later identification was swayed by that fact.

Immediately after the first three started serving their terms, their attorneys, James H. Needham of this city and Thomas Carty of Pawtucket, announced that they would seek a retrial.

They conferred with Asst.-Dist.-Atty. Frank E. Smith at New Bedford and produced affidavits signed by Hubert Finan and Bedard.

After he was locked up, Hubert Finan told the police that he evolved the idea of robbing Froment after the latter had come into a Pawtucket speakeasy and, after wheedling drinks from others, had flashed a roll of his own.

Death Deals 'Poker Alice' Her Last Hand

Rapid City, S. D., Feb. 28 (AP)—Death, dealing from "a cold deck," flipped the ace of spades for "Poker Alice" Tubbs. It was her admission card to the game that is eternity.

She was one of the last of a bizarre coterie of hard living, straight-shooting men and women who added the color—sometimes it was blood-red—to the old West. "Deadwood Dick," "Wild Bill" Hickok and "Calamity Jane" were others.

Poker Alice wore a gun, smoked cigars and could swear like a trooper, but in all of her 77 years of life she dealt from the top of the deck.

During a life as adventurous as any man's she gambled for high stakes without a single betraying quiver of the hand, without a twitch of the face. Cold as the steel of the revolver she wore, she sat in unnumbered games.

In the end death came peacefully. Old age and complications following an operation for gall stones, were given as the cause. She died in a local hospital.

Poker Alice, English born but American bred, started as a faro dealer. A woman at the box was a novelty that drew the black beards of the wild West, with their bags of gold, to the gambling table.

Colorado, Nevada, Montana, the Dakotas—wherever there was pay dirt and hombres to lay it against the turn of a card—there was Alice!

She was three times married. Her first husband was a mining engineer, her second a gambler. Her third was George Huckert, but when he died Poker Alice resumed the name of her second husband, Tubbs.

SCHOOL STRIKE ACTION IS AT STANDSTILL

The Wollaston school strike went into its fourth day with 42 pupils still absent from the Montclair school and with their names turned over once more to the truant officer.

However, the truant officer has taken no action in the matter pending the return from a convention of School Supt. James N. Muir.

The pupils are being kept out of school by parents who resent their being transferred from the Wollaston school to the Montclair school.

11-Car Derailment Ties Up C. V. Line

Montague, Feb. 28 (AP)—Eleven cars of a freight train bound from New London, Conn., to White River Junction, Vt., on the Central Vermont Railroad were derailed today causing an all-day tieup. A broken car wheel was said to have caused the derailment.

Rails were torn up for about a quarter of a mile. A wrecking crew from Brattleboro, Vt., was brought here. One car, carrying merchandise, was wrecked.

Freed of Editor Murder

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 28 (AP)—Harvey Jackson was acquitted by a jury in court here today of the murder of W. F. (Billy) Parker, editor of the Blue Shirt, a labor organ, and former editor of the Menace, anti-Catholic publication.

THREE IMPORTANT FACTORS ENTER INTO THE COST OF YOUR AUTOMOBILE

1. How much it costs to make the car

2. How much extra you pay the dealer

3. How much it costs for operation and up-keep

THE PURCHASE of an automobile involves a considerable amount of money and it should be carefully considered from all angles before a final decision is made.

The value of the car to you depends on the value built into it at the factory, how much extra you pay the dealer for distribution, selling, financing and accessories and what it will cost to operate and maintain the car after purchase. Each of these factors, as it relates to the Ford car, is frankly explained below.

Economy in production

THE FORD CAR is made economically because of the efficiency of Ford production methods. The money saved through this efficiency is put back into the car in improved quality of material and in greater care and accuracy in manufacturing. The constant effort is to eliminate waste and find ways to make each part better and better without increasing cost—frequently at lowered cost.

Because of Ford economies in large production and because the Ford organization operates on a low-profit margin, the price you pay for the car is much less than it would be under any other conditions. Yet it brings you many unusual features of construction and performance.

At least $75 extra value is represented alone by the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield, the Rustless Steel, the four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, and the five steel-spoke wheels. The unusually large number of ball and roller bearings and the extensive use of fine steel forgings instead of castings or stampings are additional features that reflect the high quality built into every part of the car. Throughout, it is a value far above the price you pay.

Low dealer charges

THE SAME PRINCIPLES of efficiency and economy that characterize the manufacture of the Ford car are applied also to distribution. Obviously it would do the public little good to save in production if these savings were sacrificed later in excessive costs of selling, financing and accessories.

The Ford dealer, therefore, operates on the same low-profit margin as the Ford Motor Company, his discount or commission being the lowest of any automobile dealer. He does a good business because he makes a small profit on many sales instead of a large profit on fewer sales.

The lower cost of selling, combined with the low charges for financing and accessories, means a direct saving of at least $50 to $75 to every purchaser of a Ford, in addition to the savings made possible by economies in manufacturing. The money you pay for a Ford goes into value in the car. It is not wasted in high dealer charges.

Low up-keep costs

IT IS IMPORTANT to remember that the cost of your automobile is not the first cost only, but the total cost after months and years of service. Here again there is a decided saving when you buy a Ford.

The cost of operation and up-keep is lower because of simplicity of design, the high quality of material, and the reduction of friction and wear through unusual accuracy in manufacturing and assembling. The reliability and longer life of the car contribute to its low depreciation per year of use.

The intelligent, painstaking service rendered by Ford dealers is under close factory supervision and is a considerable factor in the low up-keep cost of the Ford. All labor is billed at a flat rate and replacement parts are always available at low prices through Ford dealers in every section of the United States.

In two, three or five years, depending on how much you drive, the saving in operating and maintaining a new Ford will amount to even more than the saving on the first cost of the car.

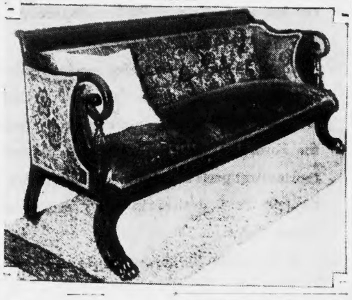
DAILY ANTIQUE

No. 31



Plymouth County and the Cape have been the home of this sofa for the past century and a quarter or more. It has been in the possession of F. A. Howard of South Easton since 1888. Originally it was owned by "Aunt" Patty Copeland, a maiden lady of Bridewater.

The sofa is of a style characterized in this country as Empire, although this particular design is not commonly seen. It will be discussed in further detail by an expert in tomorrow's editions of the American.

Strictly utilitarian ideas rather than conventional furniture design guided the unknown workman who built the odd fireside chair shown yesterday.

It is possibly the work of some wandering New England craftsman who followed either his own design or some since-forgotten model from England. Much of the early furniture of the South was made in the homes of the owners in early days by shipwrights who wandered through the country in search of any kind of carpentering and joining work when a slump hit the shipyards of New England.

In connection with the Massachusetts Tercentenary Year, the Boston Evening American will publish from day to day interesting specimens of authentic antiques. Readers possessing genuine antiques, particularly articles of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association, are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. In case no photograph is available, the American will send one of its staff cameramen to photograph your antique if you live in Greater Boston. Material should be addressed to "Antique Editor, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston."

Proud Mother!

Roland Jenkins, 6, of 31 So. Huntington Ave., Boston, is the picture of health. No wonder his mother says, "I'm proud as can be of my little son. He's always bright, active, robust!

"I give California Fig Syrup a lot of credit for his wonderful condition. I have used it with him for every little upset he had. It always has him back to normal in a few hours."

When a child shows by bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness or feverishness, that the little bowels are clogged, you know the system needs a prompt cleansing.

California Fig Syrup does the work quickly and gently. In addition, it helps tone and strengthen weak bowels and stomach. So it gives lasting help.

STATE FLAGS PRESENTED TO DAUGHTERS OF MAINE

THE progress of women's clubs is an amazing phenomena. There is no stopping their continued accomplishments and success, Mrs. Azel A. Packard, president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, told members of the Boston Daughters of Maine at a meeting held in the Hotel Brunswick.

The regular monthly meeting of the club was featured by the unexpected presentation of the Massachusetts State flag and the Maine State flag to the club by the president, who earlier in the day had received the gift from Governor Allen at the State House.

The Boston Daughters of Maine was organized in 1903 for the expressed purpose of owning and supporting an institution for aged men and women of Maine. Today this philanthropic project occupies their charitable pursuits almost exclusively and their fund for this enterprise, growing and growing, assures success in the near future.

"Pine Tree Home" is to be the name of the institution and it will be financed, supported and maintained wholly by members of this club.

The presentation of the two flags came as a complete surprise to the members and it featured an eventful day. Mrs. Albert Carmichael, president of the Boston Daughters of Maine, paid tribute to the club and the women and presented the two flags to her first vice-president, Mrs. George F. Beale who made the presentation to the club.

Mrs. Packard was the day's guest and she praised highly the great aims of this club as of all women's clubs. She told of speaking with Western clubwomen at the recent board meeting in Washington, of her interest in the difference of speech and mannerisms, of the charm and pleasantness of women beyond the Mississippi, but despite geographical limits and territorial boundaries, she was impressed by the similarity of aims and purposes of clubwomen throughout the country.

"Whatever the peculiarities of speech and manner, our purpose as women of this country and as women of the world is the same wherever we live and however we speak," Mrs. Packard assured the women.

"Underneath it all we women are interested in the same things and so we go on splendidly. And today when there are no barriers present to retard our activities we can continue.

"The progress of women's clubs is an amazing phenomena. We have done it all ourselves. We were the first women to do it. It is the outgrowth of the democracy of our country and the great opportunities afforded us. We can go on."

SISTERS WHO VISIT THE SICK

As a tribute to Mrs. Eva Abrams, first vice-president of the organization, the oldest of its kind in the city, friends and members of the lodge feted her at a tea at the Hotel Brunswick. Mrs. Abrams leaves for the South in a few days.

This organization, strickly charitable and hospitable in its work and purpose, has befriended thousands of people throughout the city. Its membership consists of more than 150 women of Greater Boston, headed by Mrs. Ray Topaz, president.

Those who had charge of the affair included Mrs. Bessie Allman, Miss Thelma Cohen, Miss Dora Stiglitz, Mrs. Anna G. Altshuler, Mrs. Harry Cohen, Mrs. Louise Isgur, Mrs. S. Shapiro, Mrs. I. Levy and Mrs. M. Oppenheim.

A "Migrator" was presented to Mrs. Abrams. Mrs. Ray Eskin sang.

LADIES' HELPING HAND AUXILIARY

Twenty-five of the older children of the Home for Jewish Children. Canterbury st., Dorchester, were treated to a performance of Robin Hood at the Majestic Theater, at the special invitation of Ben Atwell, manager of the Victor Herbert Revivals in Boston, as a preliminary gesture to the "big night," March 4, when the auxiliary takes the house over completely.

On that night representative Boston Jewry of the big-hearted and philanthropic kind will crowd the theater to swell the fund for the home and assure the continued success of the auxiliary in bringing "home" and all its advantages to youngsters who otherwise would be out in the cold.

A committee consisting of Mrs. Samuel Altman auxiliary president, Mrs. Louis Isgur, Mrs. H. Levin, Mrs. H. Seligman and Mrs. Anna G. Altshuler accompanied the boys and girls to and from the theater. However the big night is March 4 and tickets are ready for the night's entertainment. "The Merry Widow" is the vehicle.

W. MEDFORD WOMAN'S CLUB

President's day will be observed by the club Monday in Community Hall beginning with a reception at 2 p. m. followed a half hour later by the business meeting. Mrs. Azel A. Packard, State president, and Mrs. Philip H. Tirrell, director of the eighth district, are the special guests of the day.

Mrs. M. G. B. Cressy and Mrs. H. J. Gustin, vice-presidents, have charge of the program and will present the music-drama, "Paolo and Francesca," given by Bernice Wyer and Adele Hoes Lee.

The next special event of the club year will take place March 5, when at the Copley Theater the dramatic committee, of which Mrs. Lilla B. Chamberlin is the chairman, will offer "A Prince There Was" by invitation of the Presidents' Club.

Refreshments will be served by Mrs. Christine Liby and members of her hospitality committee. Members are urged to bring friends.

BROOKLINE WOMAN'S CLUB

The annual rummage sale of the club will be held in the Town Hall next Tuesday, March 4, from 10 a. m. until 4 p. m. The five philanthropic committees of the club will benefit by the proceeds. The sale is in charge of Mrs. Walter H. Woods and Mrs. Frank E. Dunham, assistant.

ALPHA CLUB.

The Alpha Club of Dorchester, Mrs. Thomas J. Berry, president, meets tonight in the Dorchester Women's clubhouse. Mrs. Sadie L. Schulman and Mrs. Thomas G. Rees, director of the fourth district, State Federation of Women's Club, will be guests. The program is in charge of the legislative department, Mrs. Benjamin Black, chairman. Mrs. William L. Evans will act as hostess.

Soft, wavy hair!

The modern sculptured bobs do wonders to bring out your personality. But like other present-day modes of arranging the hair, they call attention to it. That's why it's so important nowadays to keep your hair soft, lustrous, abundant. The easiest and quickest way to give new lustre and color to hair, which has begun to look dull and lifeless, is with Danderine. And it makes the hair softer, easier to arrange; holds it in place.

Here's all you do. Each time you use your brush just put a little Danderine on it. It removes the oily film from your hair; brings out its natural color; gives it more gloss than brilliantine. Waves "set" with it stay in longer.

Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff; puts the scalp in the pink of condition. It stops falling hair. A small bottle is enough to show its merit. Start on it tonight.

A Department Devoted to Fashions, Decoration and Social Customs

More Mature Mode Sponsors the Long Molded Line

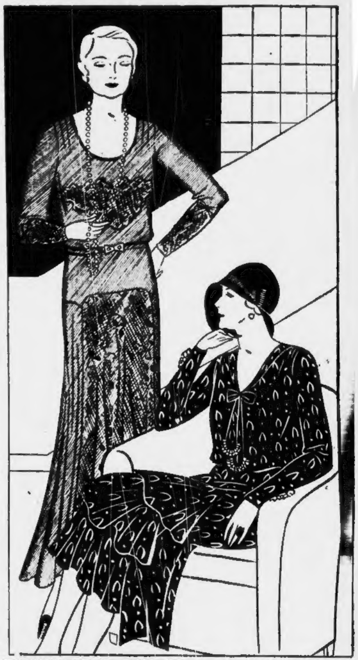
YOU who weary of the inevitable fashion term "the new silhouette" which has been used for one entire season, must have decided by now that it can no longer be termed "new." Yet surprisingly, the constant introduction of little changes, subtle modifications and a general movement to adapt it to all types, keeps this well-used term in fresh circulation.

But, you will protest, how can it seem youthfully quaint when applied to a junior type and in the next breath sophisticatedly mature when used for the older woman? The only answer is that this is the most interesting angle to this fashion phase, the new silhouette is yours to make it what you will.

TO no one has the change in silhouette been a more gracious boon than to the woman of more mature years. The short-skirted, low-belted era gave her a new mental lease on youth which need not be lost by the lengthening of a hemline, but it also did unkind things to her proportions. And for the latter reason, if for no other, she should welcome the changed order of outlines.

You who may still be unconvinced about a higher waistline and longer skirt are requested to study the two charming ladies here. These are not "older women" frocks they are wearing—they are the same fashions that young things are sponsoring, but they have the studied sophistication of line which results from cleverly adapted design and good corseting. No woman who tends to slight heaviness should think of wearing a new frock without the proper foundation.

THE printed crepe frock is an Irene Dana model which has been designed to stress good points and subtly disregard unflattering ones. A small all over pattern is printed on a black ground. Circular flounces are used in a panel effect at the front while long circular godets are used at the sides. A higher waistline is cleverly stressed by tucks but does not divide the figure into two unrelated sections, due to a long yoke effect applied at the hipline.



A more formal afternoon frock combines black Chantilly lace and chiffon with becoming results. Here again a deep hip yoke sets off a waistline belted at the normal. The skirt introduces the same long panel effect with the lace, while a flare is indicated below the hips.

The hemline of this frock just reaches the ankle. Note what a length of limb seems to have been achieved. The result is slim and distinguished—and may we add, undoubtedly youthifying.

Letters From Readers

Scouts Writer's Fear of Saloon Era

Editor Boston American:

Does the writer who frankly seems worried about drunken auto drivers in the event of a wet victory think that there is more danger with a licensed, regulated system of vending liquors than with the present unrestrained orgy of sales to anyone from seven years old to the grave without regard to anything save the danger of having to pay a fine? (Or perhaps having to go to jail while someone else carries on the unlimited business for him or her?)

The fallacy in the reasoning of the writer to whom I refer is that a victory for what he terms the "Rum-Hounds," and by which I understand he means anyone who prefers regulation to present-day Volsteadian prohibition, would automatically present this country with unlimited wide open unregulated booze-joints—a condition that I have never known to exist in Massachusetts or Vermont, let alone New York.

Assuredly the several states in this country would not be so foolish as to give up their right to prescribe conditions of sale, and also to make all legitimate sales conditional under a license system which would enable them to regulate matters for the greater public good, even as did Vermont, Massachusetts, and other states.

Questionnaire Shows People Back Navy

Editor Boston American:

The enclosed letter with the petition was not forwarded to Senator Walsh until January 30 of this year.

However, as we now have both the Naval and unemployment problems with us as they were just two years ago, the information obtained at that time should be of interest to the public.

C. L. CARPENTER.

Everett.

Hon. David I. Walsh:

I take the liberty of sending you the enclosed petitions in favor of the proposed naval building program. They are signed in ink by 400 persons not in the employ of the Government or any branch of the Naval or military service. All answered affirmatively to the question, "Do you think the United States should maintain a Navy the equal of any in the world?" A petition of greater size might have been obtained easily but it soon became apparent to me that this was entirely unnecessary. In interviewing personally over 400 people I found less than 15 who held an opposing view.

Newspaper reports, telling of many messages of opposition arriving in Washington, prompted me to try this "straw ballot" idea, keeping account of both sides thereby making a small petition one of great value. The onesidedness of it would tend to show that the messages of opposition must be coming from the widely scattered sources of perhaps a well-guided or highly organized minority.

Other interesting information discovered follows. From ten to twenty per cent showed extreme displeasure if not anger to think that the United States has not now the largest navy in the world. About one in every ten brought up the subject of aviation without being asked about it. A large percentage of the signers were greatly strengthened in their view by the present amount of unemployment. Many were influenced outright by this alone without further thought. (There is no doubt that unemployment is an issue uppermost in the public mind.) The motive behind this petition, however, is not unemployment.

It seems a conclusion that Metropolitan Boston thinks overwhelmingly that the United States needs a navy the equal of any in the world.

Sincerely yours,
C. L. CARPENTER.

Doubts Value of Letter Selling

Editor Boston American:

I noticed in the papers that a Better Letter conference was recently held at the University Club. This was promoted in the interests of making better sales letters. There is no doubt that better sales letters are essential, but personality is lacking here. You may write the best sales letter possible, but it has to have the human touch back of it.

Some business must be done by letters, no doubt, but the modern way seems to be telephone or telegraph or even radio.

Very few business men pay much attention to a well written letter, trying to sell them something. They like the salesman better, provided he is the kind of man that you cannot resist buying from. Letter writing may be improved, but you cannot improve on a good salesman who does not force his sales like some letters, but has good judgment and above a great deal of humor which is the best bait for introduction to a sale.

Says Coast Guard Would Sink "Ark"

Editor Boston American:

Last Sunday our pastor gave us a vivid description of Noah's Ark. I used to think when a boy in years gone by that "The Great Eastern," the largest boat afloat for those days, was Noah's Ark. It was anchored out in the Hudson river opposite New York, as there was no dock large enough to harbor it. That boat was queen of the ocean, but it always reminded me of Noah's Ark.

I am persuaded in my own mind after thinking many things over, if Noah's Ark were seen on the ocean today, it would be sunk by the U. S. Coast Guard. Am I not right in this? Please tell me if I am wide of the mark as Noah must have had something exhilarating, if we read aright what happened to him afterwards.

Autos Knock Down Town's New Trees

Editor Boston American:

In our town we have planted off and on a number of trees on our streets. In the last year we have had about twenty trees knocked down by motor cars mounting the pavements. This is pure carelessness. Drivers of autos rail against jay walkers but trees do not jay walk.

Pope Protests 'Art' of Christ in Boots

Berlin, Feb. 28 (AP)—The Papal Nuncio today filed a protest with the federal Prussian Government against a Communist exhibition of paintings, one of which portrayed Christ on the cross wearing a gas mask and a pair of high boots.

The action followed the Centrist party's protest in the Landtag against derision of Christianity and "slandering the Pope, a Christian sovereign." The police have seized four paintings from the exhibit.

Hallelujah Star Billed at Mah Jong

Winton D. Bee, manager of the Mah Jong Restaurant, offers another very unusual bill of entertainment.

Bee is featuring this week William Fontaine and his "Chocolate Dandies." Fontaine is leading man in the talking picture "Hallelujah" which will appear in Boston next week, and it is the first time this act has ever played in a night club. A girl revue is on this week. Roy Fontaine, songster and entertainer, will take charge of banquets and private parties.

Arlington to Hold Anniversary Feast

Arlington is planning many events in connection with the 300th anniversary of the founding of the Massachusetts Bay Colony and its celebration program will be launched on Tuesday evening with a public banquet in the Robbins Memorial Town Hall, Arlington Center, under the auspices of the Arlington Chamber of Commerce.

The date chosen for this opening event is appropriate, as it was just 300 years ago March 4 that King Charles I signed the charter granted to Governor John Winthrop and his associates of the Massachusetts Bay Colony. Flags will be flown during the day and church bells will be rung at noon.

"I Would Suffer Agony After Meals," Says Cambridge Barber

"And When I Read of Relief Other Sufferers Were Getting I Also Bought Bon-Tone"

Mr. Luis Ramos, of 24 Bristol Street, Cambridge Mass., is a member of the Barbers' Union of Boston, and the proprietor of the barber shop at 255 Portland Street, Cambridge. Mr. Ramos states:

"I was in terribly poor health for the past four years. After eating anything, no matter how light, I would suffer agony. The food seemed to lie just in the middle of my stomach, and felt like a lump of lead, and I would have the most distressed feeling and would be fairly loaded up with gas, which kept me belching continually. I also suffered from dizzy spells, which were very severe at times, and I also had constipation to contend with. Before taking Bon-Tone I was continually taking pills of some sort trying to get a movement.

"I was first induced to try Bon-Tone by reading about all the local people who were using it and getting marvelous results. I have now taken four bottles of Bon-Tone and feel great. My food digests well, and I have no gas, nor any dizzy spells. When I started using Bon-Tone I weighed 123 pounds—I now weigh 133. Owing to these fine results I am both pleased and glad to recommend Bon-Tone."

Go to Epstein Drug Co., Inc., Scollay Square, Boston, and meet our representative. He will explain more about Bon-Tone to you.

For your convenience Bon-Tone is for sale in South Boston at John S. Austin's Drug Store, Perkins Square, and in Cambridge at the Cole Drug Co., 636 Mass. Avenue, Central Square.

NEGOTIATING FOR SCREEN RIGHTS TO GEORGE BERNARD SHAW STORY

IRISH BARD LURED BY TALKIES

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service.)

ELKHART, Ind., Feb. 28.—George Bernard Shaw, noted for his antipathy against permitting any of his literature to be filmed, is about to permit his works to go talkie. At least such is the report telegraphed me in the wilds of Indiana. R-K-O through that indefatigable and energetic young business man, William Le Baron, is now negotiating with the one and only Shaw.

* * *

Louella O. Parsons

THAT isn't all Bill Le Baron is planning for R-K-O. "The Chocolate Soldier" is to be filmed with Edward Marshall in the leading role. Paul Sloane has been signed on a two-year contract to direct and his first under the new arrangement will be this same "Chocolate Soldier." With Oscar Straus right in Hollywood arranging for the music of "The Chocolate Soldier" was a simple matter, and with Edward Marshall of Metropolitan Opera fame right at the R-K-O studios—well it's only a matter of days now before this tuneful operetta will go into production.

* * *

I HAVE been sitting in my chair here on the fast moving Century wondering what I should write about when a telegram was handed me giving information about a new co-operative producing company just formed. Having an inquisitive mind I am wondering just what will happen to the new co-operative film company. You see it's this way—if they make money the actors will be paid and if the ledger shows a deficiency it will just be too bad. The actors who have agreed to work on this basis are Henry B. Walthall, Dorothy Burgess, Leatrice Joy, Roland Drew and Alan Hale.

The new company will be called the Joseph P. Henaberry Productions and headquarters will be maintained at the Metropolitan Studios. Harold Shumate, former production head of Gotham, is with Henaberry as chief scenarist and he is the author of "The Lover Trader," the first co-operative picture to be made. O, yes, the actors are changed with each production.

Daryl Zanuck tells us that Dorothy Burgess, co-operative plans notwithstanding, is to have the lead in "Fame," which features Belle Bennett and John Halliday. Little Burgess, who made such a hit in "In Old Arizona" and then went to the stage, hasn't done very much since her spectacular success in the Fox Western, but Mr. Zanuck believes she will repeat her former success in "Fame," which is a role peculiarly suited to her talents.

* * *

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected by an observer:

Al Jolson and wife, Ruby Keeler, enjoying the desert sunshine at Palm Springs.

W. S. Van Dyke giving the Wampas boys a thrill by telling his adventures hunting big game in Africa.

Tom and Victoria Mix back in Hollywood greeting old friends.

Sidney Olcott remembering friends in Hollywood with post cards from the S. S. Majestic.

Edna Murphy and Mervyn Le Roy dining at the Brown Derby.

Lola Lane and Doris at the same place.

Dorothy Mackaill being complimented on her appearance by her friends. She is dieting and it has worked miracles. That is all today. See you tomorrow.

Signs Artist

F. J. Van Halle, Belgian artist, has been added to the color art staff of Technicolor. His engagement follows that of Andre Durenceau, noted French artist. Technicolor's staff of advisory artists also includes Jack Holden and Louise M. Warner.

Midnight Show

The Old Howard will have a special midnight show tonight following the regular evening performance. The burlesque bill will be "Bowery Burlesquers;" the program will also include a number of additional features.

DURANTE AND RUGGLES SHARE HONORS IN FILM AT MET

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

CHARLIE RUGGLES is in again, and on again! And alongside him, Jimmy Durante, master mimer, and the two of them comedians de luxe, able if need be to get a thousand laughs out of a Freudian lecture. This pair of aces, together with a generally well-balanced cast and excellent direction, make "Roadhouse Nights," now at the Metropolitan, a very entertaining film that snaps along at rare speed. Almost always it's in high!

* * *

Charles Ruggles

MELODRAMA is here, heavy-weighted and yet acceptable; but the comedy's the thing. Durante and Ruggles could squeeze a smile out of a lemon; in the picture they have good "business"; the lines are bright, and the dialogue sizzles when mouthed by these two. So you find yourself laughing at script wit, at mere facial change, even at nothing-in-particular. Ruggles, of course, is again the toper, just as drunk as he was in "Gentlemen of the Press" and "The Lady Lies," and even more comic. He is a good actor in a serious vein, also. It is pleasant to record that he and Durante are the stars of the show; and we are inclined to think the latter's triumph will break up that great vaudeville and stage revue team of Clayton, Jackson and Jackson. It looks as if Durante is headed for big things in the movies. His face could be his fortune, but behind the makeup is a brain, and a personality.

* * *

THE story, like a number of predecessors, ties up the newspaper game with the rum racketeers. One reporter sent to look into the liquor gang's doings is "put out of the way." Ruggles follows on the same quest of news; he finds a roadhouse is the gang's "hangout." In Helen Morgan, cast as singer in the resort, Ruggles meets a boyhood sweetheart. After the comedian has climbed through a transom as his only means of getting into the roadhouse, the action is swift as an Alpine stream. It never lets up; the sequences are brief and are briskly cut, the photography is superb, the cameras move about with commendable intelligence. The plot swings out of the rut, believeable complications arise. There is no overplay of the villainous stuff. In short, the picture is mighty pleasing.

* * *

MISS MORGAN sings her blues songs in her usual style, acts well enough and looks superb. Fred Kohler is fine as the rum king. A newspaperman may hand Leo Donnelly a bit of praise for his characterization of the city editor. But with the Messrs. Ruggles and Durante, the chief awards of merit are tossed to the film's director, Hobart Henley, remembered for his brilliant talkie, "The Lady Lies."

* * *

BORIS PETROFF'S "Tin Type Revue" is the stage presentation. Among its lights are Lora Hoffman, Lassiter Bros.; Three White Flashes; Dorothea Burke dancers, and Charley Hill. Mr. Geissler conducts the orchestra through "The Vagabond King" melodies; and Mr. Martel presides at the console. Eddie Cantor is seen and heard in a film short; and other specials are also good.

'NOT SO DUMB' IDEAL FOR MARION

MARION DAVIES' third picture under King Vidor's direction, "Not So Dumb," is said to be an even more successful effort than her two earlier silent pictures which Vidor directed, "Show People" and "The Patsy." Miss Davies' extraordinary talent as a comedienne was demonstrated conclusively in "The Patsy" and "Show People," but "Not So Dumb" is believed to have provided the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actress with the best humorous story material of her career.

"Not So Dumb," which will come on Monday to Loew's State, is based on the long-run Broadway stage hit, "Dulcy," the product of George S. Kaufman and Marc Connelly. "Dulcy" not only proved one of the most popular comedies ever produced on the legitimate stage in New York, but also was unusually successful during its road engagements throughout the country.

The dialogue for "Not So Dumb" was prepared by Edwin Justus Mayer, noted playwright and author of "The Firebrand," who is now under long-term contract to M-G-M.

Included in the cast of "Not so Dumb" are a number of young players who have shown great promise in their last few roles. Sally Starr, who has the chief feminine role, next to Miss Davies, in the new film, made her talking picture debut in "So This is College," where her work was enthusiastically received by reviewers.

Elliott Nugent, son of J. C. Nugent, is now with his father at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, preparing new story material and also appearing before the camera. He and his father collaborated on many outstanding stage successes, notably "The Poor Nut" and "Kempy." Nugent has the chief male role in "Not so Dumb."

Raymond Hackett is the juvenile lead who was brought to the coast after studio executives saw him on the stage in "The Trial of Mary Dugan." Hackett played in "The Trial of Mary Dugan," "Madame X" and other dialogue films.

Donald Ogden Stewart is recognized as one of America's leading humorists, but it was not only a couple of years ago that he fulfilled a long-deferred ambition to go on the stage. He appeared behind the footlights in "Holiday" and played his first important role in a picture in "Not so Dumb."

Bebe Daniels Film

May Beatty and John Ince have been cast for feature parts in support of Bebe Daniels in "Smooth As Satin," RKO's talker version of the Bayard Veiller play, "The Chatterbox." Others in the cast include Robert Emmet O'Connor, Charles Giblin, Betty Pierce and Nella Walker. George Archainbaud will direct.

Added to Cast

Nella Walker has been added to the cast of "Smooth as Satin," Bebe Daniels' third Radio starring vehicle. Ben Lyon plays opposite the star under the direction of George Archainbaud.

Lupe Velez Signed for Lead in "The Storm"

Lupe Velez has been signed by Universal for the leading role in the sound version of "The Storm," which William Wyler is directing with William Boyd in the male lead. Miss Velez has replaced Laura La Plante who is ill, and because of the fact that the picture is scheduled for release early in May, the company is proceeding with the production in order to deliver it on time. Lupe Velez joins the company in Sonora.

SOPRANO HAS GOOD CLAIM TO TITLE

By MOSES SMITH

AMID the welter of mediocrities that parade before the concert-goer as singers, one hears now and then one who can really sing. Rachel Morton, a soprano who was heard here last year, gave a most enjoyable concert at Jordan Hall last night, and proved her right to the title "soprano."

Miss Morton has in good measure all the attributes necessary for success in concert singing—or even in opera. Her voice is not one of those nebulous affairs often doing duty for an intelligent artist. It has beautiful quality, it is of sufficient range, especially for the high tones, and it has enough power to enable its owner to appear without disadvantage in opera.

This instrument is skilfully, expressively managed by the soprano. Her program offered wide variety of opportunity to display her exceptional endowment and musical intelligence. In Beethoven's "Ah! Perfido" and the "Suicide" aria from "La Gioconda" Miss Morton was truly dramatic without the help of the opera accoutrements. Her tones were powerful enough to meet the exacting demands without forcing.

In the more intimate, more subtle songs in German, French and English Miss Morton was even more successful. Having no need to give thought to technical demands, she could become a song interpreter. She approached each song with delightful freshness, and for each she had not only an intelligent plan but the proper "temperamental" aid. Her enunciation was remarkably distinct. In fact, she overdid things, pronouncing final consonants with disconcerting emphasis.

The large audience warmed to these virtues as the concert progressed, causing the addition of many extra numbers.

Role for Fleming

Claude Fleming has been added to the cast of "One Night at Susie's," in which First National is starring Billie Dove.

Two Peaches

JEANETTE MacDONALD

PREMIERE of "The Vagabond King" will be next Thursday at the Uptown. Miss MacDonald is the prima donna. Looks as if she's having a peach of a time.

GERMAN STAR MASTERING ENGLISH

EMIL JANNINGS exiled by the talkies, is planning a return from Elba! Determined that his lack of English should not permanently bar him from the American screen, Jannings has been patiently smoothing out the intricacies of our language. And guess what has happened?

When Director Joseph von Sternberg completed the Teutonic version of the Jannings Berlin-made talkie, "The Blue Angel," he and Emil went quietly to work on an English-speaking version. The picture was well suited to the experiment, for in it Emil is a German professor who falls for an actress with the disastrous results that have pursued him through all his film stories.

Thus the accent still audible in Emil's speech is nicely accounted for and the lapses into German do not appear out of place. The dialogue is so arranged that the speeches which actually advance the plot of the story are made in German. And Jannings does so excellently that a whisper from overseas declares the great Emil will be back with us before the year is done.

Meantime there are more immediate plans for his leading woman, Marlene Deitrich. She played Jannings' daughter in "The Last Laugh." And it is she who is the prima donna of "The Blue Angel." It is understood that Fraulein Deitrich has been wasting no time in the acquisition of English. She, too, tried out the new tongue in the English version of the film.

DEFENSE WINS 4-DAY WAR GAME

Panama City, Feb. 28 (AP) — United States military forces defending the Panama Canal scored a decisive victory over an attacking fleet in the four-day war game manoeuvers just completed here, seasoned observers believe.

Aerial battles, smoke screens, and bombardments by fleet and coast defense were included in the final day's activities. Defense airplanes picked up the attacking fleet at daylight, almost 100 miles from the Canal Zone, after having observed activities of destroyers and submarines during the night.

Hours later the attackers launched their long-expected aerial assault. The attacking fleet resorted to smoke screens to hide its movements, but due to some unusual atmospheric condition the screen fell rapidly, making it easy for the defense to spot the ships.

The fleet attempted to put a hostile landing party near the mouth of the Bayano river, but the movement was forestalled by the defense planes of the coast defense station, the ships attempting the landing being under their fire for almost an hour prior to withdrawal of the landing force.

Both army and navy officials were delighted with the thoroughness of the manoeuvers and the success with which they were held.

Chicopee Plans Big Sewer Extension

Chicopee, Feb. 28 (AP) — Mayor Henry Cloutier today announced he would ask the Board of Aldermen to appropriate $150,000 to allow a start on an extensive program of sewer building in order to provide employment.

This sum is much larger than the normal annual appropriation for the purpose.

The unemployment situation here, accentuated by prevailing slackness in textile mills which comprise a large part of the city's industries, is becoming increasingly serious, the mayor announced.

FROZEN MEATS GREAT HELP IN BUYING

REMEMBER the frozen pork chops and lamb chops that I told you I enjoyed down on the Cape last summer—chops that you can buy in pound packages carefully wrapped in cellophane and trimmed of all surplus fat.

[illegible] in a trip through the Boston branch of one of the world's largest packing houses I saw a great variety of meats and poultry frozen by the new [illegible] process and packed in sanitary neat cellophane wrappings. It is not necessary to thaw these delicious frozen meats. Simply [illegible] them in your [illegible] and proceed with the usual method of cooking [illegible]

[illegible] roast [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] hundred [illegible] [illegible] Lamb chops too [illegible] and lamb loin roast as well as [illegible] leg of lamb [illegible] can be purchased frozen and [illegible] packed.

Porterhouse steaks, club steaks, pork tenderloin, veal chops and cutlets were other meats frozen by this wonderful new process. Even lamb for stew comes to you beautifully trimmed and packed in a neat pound square with its heavy cellophane transparent wrapping.

Soon they tell me tenderloin steaks as well as rump round, ham [illegible] and veal leg and shoulders will be available.

What a boon these new frozen packaged meats are to those of us—and that means most of us—who have bought our fresh meats more or less by guess, having few means of identifying good quality. These frozen meats are one of the forward steps that the housewife will welcome as it makes the buying of meat as easy as that of bread. Then too it gives her certainty of [illegible] and best cuts [illegible] cleanliness, the meat being wrapped before shipping, and freshness since the flavor and freshness is [illegible] by the quick freezing process.

Even whole fowl come carefully dressed with the liver and gizzard [illegible] wrapped in heavy wax paper and these superior quality milk fed birds are all ready to pop into your oven or skillet.

We used two of these fowl in the Martha Lee cooking school this week.

A Dinner of Salmon

In a small family a can of salmon may be divided and used for a salad [illegible] for an entree [illegible]

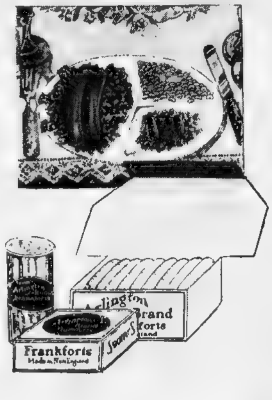
You Will Delight In The Flavor Of

Arlington FRANKFORTS



The old adage that "Beauty is Only Skin Deep" may apply to human beings but not to Frankforts. While the outside of any good Frankfort must be attractive, it's the meat inside which determines the quality. The superior flavor of Arlington Frankforts is due to fine quality meats and choice spices. You will notice how clear and smooth the meat is in Arlington. You will delight in the flavor—pleasing, but not too highly seasoned. Serve Frankforts oftener in your home—and insist on Arlington.

BROCCOLI NOW AT ITS BEST

If our office family wears a cat-and-canary expression these days you'll know it's because we are taking our daily quota of leafy vegetables in the form of broccoli. With all the delicate flavor of cauliflower and the tenderness of asparagus, broccoli is to us the ideal vegetable, especially when boiled until tender and dressed with a liberal amount of melted butter and grated Parmesan cheese. Best of all, it is selling at 15c to 19c a pound. We paid 15c for ours down on North Market st. (and found it of superior quality).

Texas is sending large amounts of spinach so it is offered at the reasonable price of 25c for three pounds. Green peas from Mexico are cheap at 15c to 18c a pound, and tomatoes are lower. Mushrooms, carrots, and onions are moderately priced also, but squash is a little higher. Chives, chicory, anise, scallions, escarole, dandelions and other less common vegetables are offered by some of the larger markets to help give variety to the menu and the fresh vegetable salad.

A few New England McIntosh apples are to be found at 60c to 75c a dozen and strawberries are cheaper—the quart baskets selling from 49c to 55c.

Butter is still low and the price on city store eggs has slipped down several cents.

Lamb is the outstanding buy at the meat counter and poultry prices are moderate, also. The mild weather has meant liberal shipments of fish and has kept the price low—haddock 8c to 10c a pound, cod steak 15c to 20c, and honest-to-goodness fresh halibut at 45c to 49c.

An Apple Delicacy

Fill pastry lined pan with well-flavored apples, pared, cored and cut in eighths. Sprinkle thickly with sugar and pour a few spoonfuls of water over them. Bake until apples are tender, then spread over them halved marshmallows and return to oven to brown delicately.

Use the Lemon Peel

To make a very economical lemon jelly and use less lemons: First wash lemons and squeeze out the juice. Place skins in cold water and boil. Use this water instead of plain hot water when dissolving the gelatine which has been soaked in cold water. This gives jelly a much stronger lemon flavor.

SPANISH MOBS RIOT; CRY 'DOWN WITH KING!'

Madrid, Feb. [illegible] (AP)—Metropolitan Spain [illegible] was swept by a tide of republic[illegible] and anti-monarchical [illegible] after a public pronouncement by Jose Antonio Sanchez Guerra, former premier and bitter enemy of the late dictatorship, in which he said "I never again will serve the present king."

Thousands gathered in the streets of Madrid and fought with police who attempted to put down their red banners and hush their shouts of "down with the king" and "death to the king."

Ten civilians were arrested and one man was injured seriously in a clash outside the theater where the former premier's speech was delivered.

Gen. Damaso Berenguer, the new Spanish premier, [illegible] that henceforth all [illegible] speeches will be prohibited [illegible] of Senor Sanchez [illegible]. Many [illegible] leaders of all parties [illegible] prepared for [illegible] pronouncement, but [illegible] apparently [illegible].

Sanchez Guerra's speech had been [illegible] in Spain [illegible] man and [illegible] Spanish Republicans [illegible] he would [illegible] ing [illegible].

To [illegible] republican adherents the speech was a disappointment. The former premier [illegible] a republic. He did say that the movement for a republic in Spain was stronger than ever and that the country might soon adopt that form of government.

Five Are Arrested in Outbreak at Barcelona

Barcelona, Feb. 28 (AP)—Cries of "Down with the Government" were heard in a demonstration which occurred here after the speech of Jose Antonio Sanchez Guerra, former premier, in Madrid, denouncing the monarchy.

A crowd of [illegible] persons stormed a newspaper [illegible] copies of extra editions of newspapers with the former premier's speech. Fights [illegible] but police intervened and arrested two persons.

The crowd demanded the release of those detained and the police retaliated by arresting three more.

GILLETTE CO. PLANS DRIVE

The importance of the daily newspaper [illegible] was emphasized by Frank J. Fahey, vice president and general manager of the Gillette Safety Razor Co., in discussing the $10,000,000 campaign the company will put on to support their new razors and blades.

"Gillette long ago," he said, "demonstrated its faith in the American daily newspaper as an advertising medium. It is not surprising, therefore, that we have set apart a substantial amount of our advertising budget for 1930 to tell our story to the American people through the American newspaper press."

He said further that "we feel that in our new model razor and blades we have the finest thing ever offered the men of this country for their daily shave. We are naturally desirous of putting the message across quickly," he said. "As a consequence, we will tell it through large display advertisements in the daily newspapers of more than 200 American cities."

Life Was a Misery

"Before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was weak and rundown, could not sleep and had troubles which come at my age (forty-three). Life was a misery. Nothing did me any good until I tried the Vegetable Compound. I am on my third bottle and I cannot recommend it too highly. I feel like a new person and I really think I would have been dead if I had not taken it. I think every lady ought to take it at the Change."—*Mrs. Eunice M. FRENCH FLIERS PLAN FOR U. S. FLIGHTS

[illegible] Bourget, France, Feb. [illegible] (AP). The transatlantic flight [illegible] Paris to New York [illegible] to open in a few weeks and mechanics, airport clerks and newspaper men who have spent countless sleepless nights in past [illegible] awaiting takeoffs that never left the sheds are storing in [illegible] of slumber.

Dieudonne Coste and Capt. Carretier are the most prominent French fliers who have announced their intention of trying the big hop.

Armeno Lotti, Raoul Lefevre and Jean Assolant, who negotiated Old Orchard, Me., to San Sebastian, Spain, will attempt to cross the Atlantic the other way, but it is said that their hopping-off point will be Seville, Spain.

Coste and Carretier are having a race already to determine who shall be ready to take off first. Both are thought to be bending their efforts toward taking-off at the end of May or the beginning of June.

Paul Codos, the air mail pilot who recently assisted Coste in his [illegible] record-breaking flights [illegible] is likely to accompany the long distance record holder [illegible] Maurice Bellonte as mechanic and wireless operator.

The plane which is now nearly completed at Le Bourget shops is a [illegible] of the Question Mark [illegible] which Coste flew [illegible]. It will be propelled by [illegible] horsepower Hispano-Suiza [illegible] have a flying capacity of [illegible] and average a speed of 125 miles an hour for the first 10 hours, increasing gradually as the load decreases with the consumption of fuel and oil.

Carretier's plane, work upon which was started by the Cousinet plane builders Jan. 2, is a thick-winged monoplane with the gasoline and oil contained in the wings. It is similar to that in which the late Maurice Drouhin, former pilot for Charles A. Levine, fell to his death last year. It is designed to [illegible] 13 tons, the power being supplied by three 520-horsepower Hispano-Suiza motors.

Assolant, Lefevre and Lotti have had their Yellow Bird renovated and will put their faith in the plane which carried them through fog and storms from Maine to Spain in 1929 to transport them from Spain to New York in 1930.

Sets Record

Miss Louise Tinsley, 22, of Omaha, Nebraska's first licensed woman flier, is believed to have set a record for women air enthusiasts when she soloed after six hours and 20 minutes of dual instruction. After 10 hours of solo flying she passed the Commerce Department examination. (Associated Press photo.)

UNITED FRUIT CO. BIDS ON 3 MAIL ROUTES

Washington, Feb. 28 (INS). The postoffice department today received [illegible] mail on four [illegible] routes. The United Fruit Co. of Boston submitted bids [illegible] San Francisco to Puerto Armuelles, New York to [illegible] Costa Rica, and New Orleans to Puerto Colombia.

The Grace Steamship [illegible] of New York bid on [illegible] [illegible] are present contractors on the four routes.

The contract, when awarded, will be for a period of ten years and under the terms of the contract several new ships must be built.

SQUANTUM BASE BILL APPROVED

Washington, Feb. 28 (AP). The Andrew bill authorizing the Secretary of the Navy to lease the United States naval [illegible] and [illegible] at Squantum, Mass., for 25 years instead of the present maximum of five years was reported favorably today by the House naval affairs committee.

[illegible] to Quincy and Boston, Representative Wigglesworth, Republican, Massachusetts, told the committee that [illegible] was impossible on a short term lease basis.

He said the failure of Congress to pass the 25-year lease legislation last year had resulted in the Victory Terminal Company going into the hands of receivers.

LOVEJOY by BEATRICE BURTON

A Tense Serial of Love, Romance of Today

CHAPTER 42

LOVEJOY jumped up from her chair and caught Tom by his sleeve.

"Please don't listen to her, Tom [illegible] And now she's trying to make [illegible] have her bus' she's going to tell you a whole pack of lies about me. She's a blackmailer, that's what she is."

Tom looked at her in blank amazement.

Then he turned his head and stared at Hilda. He gave a short bark of laughter.

"Well, I certainly am all at sea," he said in his quiet, off-hand way. "What's this all about, anyway? Blackmailer? Who's a blackmailer—Hilda?"

He was smiling now, as if all this were some kind of a huge joke. But he was puzzled, too. A deep line had come between his eyes.

[illegible] Hilda was [illegible] now [illegible] But she [illegible] letter [illegible] them to you."

She had two square white envelopes in her hand. She held them up, and from where she stood Lovejoy could see the familiar South Port postmark on them.

"Every day Missis gets letters like these," Hilda went on in her heavy voice. "She gets telegrams, too. I copied one of them down. She pays me money to get it away from me, but first I copy it down on paper. See?"

She took a scrap of paper torn from a bag out of her handbag. She held it out to Tom, along with the two letters.

"Don't touch them, Tom! Don't believe her!" Lovejoy was half-hysterical by this time. "Aline will tell you that they aren't my letters!—Aline knows all about them. Don't you, Aline?"

She turned to look at Aline, and Tom turned, too. Both of them seemed to be holding their breath waiting for what she was going to say.

For a full half minute Aline did not open her lips. Her face had gone dead white under its gay coating of rouge and powder.

She shook her head.

"I'm sorry, Lovejoy," she said, getting to her feet. "I can't help you out. I don't know anything about those letters, and you know I don't. Please, please don't drag me into this."

Without taking her eyes from Lovejoy's face she spoke to her husband.

"Al, I think we'd better go," she said to him.

And before Lovejoy realized what she was doing she was out of the room.

Down the front steps she went in headlong flight with her husband at her heels.

And Lovejoy was left alone to face the music!

* * *

She turned to Tom.

"Well!" she said with a short hard sigh. "That was just what I might have known Aline would do! —Those letters are hers, Tom, and so is that telegram! She's been getting her mail here for a long time."

"Addressed to you?" asked Tom contemptuously. He did not believe her. That was plain.

"These envelopes have your name on them," he went on, turning them over and looking carefully at them.

"They're her letters, too!" Hilda broke in triumphantly. "And she used to be always calling up a man she called Steve! She used to go out nights to meet him when you was away, Mister! She used to make me stay at home with the baby on my basket ball nights at the Scandinavian Club!"

"That's enough, Hilda," Tom said.

When she was gone he came back to Lovejoy. There was a look of savage misery in his eyes as they met hers above the bridge table with its half-emptied glasses and its half-filled ash trays.

"Now, then, what's the low down on all this?" he asked, sitting down and laying the envelopes and the scrap of paper before him.

"I've told you the truth," Lovejoy answered. "Aline has been getting letters from some man in South Port. She's been getting them here and they've all been addressed to me. . . . That's the whole story. Hilda got hold of some of them and tried to sell them to me and I fired her—two or three weeks ago."

"She said you paid her money to give back that telegram," said Tom, his eyes on the scrap of paper.

"Well, I did. But Aline gave me the money to pay to her. And then she gave her a check, besides."

Tom's lip curled.

"I see," he said. "And what about the night when you telephoned Steve Oglebay and [illegible]?"

Lovejoy's white face burned with a deep rose flush at that.

"Well, I did do that," she admitted. "I did. But it was because I was peeved at you for going out to play poker. And I would have told you about it sooner or later. I did tell you about last Saturday night, didn't I? Tom, I'm not a cheat and a liar—"

"Is that so?" Tom asked in a voice that she scarcely knew.

He shoved the scrap of paper across the table to her. In Hilda's cramped and shaky handwriting was a copy of the telegram that Aline had taken from her on the last day she had spent in Lovejoy's kitchen:

"MRS. THOMAS NICHOLSON, STALLING'S LANE"—

The letters danced before her eyes. She had to blink hard to see them at all.

"GOT AWAY SAFELY. BEST LOVE TO MY LITTLE PEACH. LETTER FOLLOWS.
(SIGNED) SO."

"He's a brave lover, isn't he?"

FIND BODY OF WOMAN IN RIVER

Authorities Mystified by Discovery; No Marks of Violence on Corpse

Mystery surrounds the death of a well-dressed, unidentified woman whose body was found floating in Charles river, near Ash st., Cambridge, today.

Following an examination, Medical Examiner David C. Dow made no finding as to the cause of death. He said he would make a more complete examination later.

There were no marks visible on the body when it was brought ashore by Metropolitan Policemen W. J. Cronin and Alfred Goddard, which led them to believe the woman may have committed suicide. The body had been in the water not more than ten hours, according to the police.

The body was floating 10 feet from shore when discovered by Mrs. Emily Sigese, who was exercising her dog along the river boulevard.

The woman was about 40 years of age, five feet, seven inches tall, and weighed about 150 pounds. She had good teeth and brown hair. She wore a green felt hat, gray gloves, white scarf, black fur coat, black silk stockings, black low shoes and blue silk dress.

No report of a missing woman has been made to the Cambridge police.

HARVARD GETS FOREIGN BIRDS

Two large collections of birds, one of 8000 from China, considered the finest in existence, and another of 2500 from South America, have been added to the Museum of Comparative Zoology at Harvard University through generosity of alumni.

The Chinese birds were collected by J. D. La Touche, formerly a member of the Chinese postal service, and represents 40 years of labor. The second is an almost complete collection of birds from Surinam and was brought together by Thomas E. Penard of Arlington, whose family have been planters in that country for generations.

How Much of Fence Will State Remove?

Having won her court fight against the Metropolitan District Commission over the wire fence it erected in front of her doughnut factory on Old Colony boulevard, Mrs. Edith E. Gleason today awaits the removal of the fence.

The big question now, as far as she and her husband, Earl Gleason, are concerned, is how much of the fence the commission will remove. The Supreme Court of Massachusetts has ruled that the commission had no right to obstruct an entrance to the $25,000 doughnut plant, but the decision did not specify how much of the fence should be removed.

IN COURTS OVER YEAR.

So the question today is how much of the fence will be removed and when the fence will vanish. The State board may make only a hole in the fence or it may remove the entire fence.

It seems that in October, 1928, Mrs. Gleason opened a handsome doughnut factory on Old Colony boulevard, Dorchester. It was near an overhead railroad bridge at a curve.

Just as everything was going fine, the metropolitan commission stepped in and fenced the doughnut factory off from the outside.

Claiming that this act hurt their business, Mrs. Gleason, with her husband, sought to have the fence removed by superior court order, which was successful.

But the commission appealed to the highest State court.

RIGHT OF ACCESS

The commission claimed that it understood only a wholesale business would be carried on when it originally granted the permit, but that instead it became all retail.

In rendering its finding the Supreme Court said the doughnut factory site is not on a parkway or boulevard which by law is for recreation spaces.

The court stated the land of the doughnut factory was on a public highway and therefore the abutter, who in this case was Mrs. Gleason, has a perfect right of access.

LEGION DINNERS NUMEROUS

Boston hotels, even Boston itself, may face a food shortage next fall along about October, judging by the schedule of banquets, dinners, luncheons, breakfasts and other feasts booked for the annual convention of the American Legion from October 5 to 9.

The number of large banquets and dinners such as will seat [illegible] in the hundreds is approximately 125. These are practically evenly divided between the legion and legion auxiliary, while a few will be held by other affiliated organizations of the legion.

Numbered among the legion dinners are the dinner to the national commander, that to the incoming commander, the state dinner and 52 department dinners. The auxiliary schedule is somewhat similar, with their state dinner heading the list, others being the 52 department dinners, the secretaries' dinner, Past President Farley's, Fidac luncheon and two breakfasts.

PUP PLAYMATE GONE, BOY SAD

If you were a little lad of five and the puppy you had played with since it was two weeks old strayed away, you'd feel blue, wouldn't you? Of course you would.

And that's just how it is with Jackie Callahan, only child of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Callahan of 41 Cabot st., Newton. His 4½ months old wire-haired fox terrier playmate, "Patches," followed another child to Centre st., Newton, last Saturday and has remained away since. As a result, Jackie is disconsolate.

His parents hope for the puppy's return and offer a reward. The dog is white, with black and brown patches. There is a large black patch on his back. His face is light brown.

2 END 50-YEAR R. R. SERVICE

Two Greater Boston railroad conductors completed 50 years of service today and one of them with [illegible] farewell to fellow [illegible] retired on pension.

The men are Charles H. Cook of 16 [illegible] st., Everett, who made his last run today on the Twentieth Century Limited of the Boston & Albany [illegible] and John [illegible] Drummey [illegible] Hyde Park, who was presented [illegible] emblem in South Station signifying the completion of half a century on the New Haven railroad.

Tears came to the eyes of Charles Cook as he stepped from the Twentieth Century Limited on his last run and bade his crew [illegible]. Despite [illegible] years of service Mr. Cook is in perfect health and does not appear to be 70 years of age. He has attained that age, however, and being eligible to pension, he retired at the end of his run today. He received letters from Gov. Frank G. Allen and Mayors Curley of Boston and McGrath of Quincy.

Conductor Drummey was presented a gold emblem at South Station in the presence of several officials of the New Haven and many of his associates. He has been a familiar figure on trains operating to West Roxbury, Boston, Dorchester, Readville, Norwood, Walpole and Franklin.

Shame on Michele Rossi, the careless fellow. His pension in Newton has been piling up for two years and Rossi hasn't been around to collect it.

Because Rossi, who used to live in Emerald st., Newton, has been so absent minded—you know how it is about those little things—Mayor Sinclair Weeks has ordered the pension suspended.

Rossi is believed to be in Italy, but if he comes back and claims his pension, the suspension will be lifted and all past payments due will be made him.

MANY CONTESTS DUE AT POLLS IN FOUR TOWNS NEXT MONDAY

WOMEN SEEK OFFICES AT ELECTIONS

Arlington, Lexington, Bedford and Dedham Are Ready for Ballot Battles

Candidates for town offices are plentiful in Arlington, Lexington, Dedham and Bedford, where the annual elections will be held next Monday.

Eighteen aspirants for the eight major Arlington offices will close their campaigns tomorrow, and it is predicted that nearly every contest will be decided by a close margin.

Chief interest centers in the candidacy of Daniel M. Hooley, retired police lieutenant, who is seeking a place on the board of selectmen.

He is widely known because of the 42 years he served with the Arlington police department. He is opposed by William O. Hauser and William P. Dale.

Miss Anna B. Callahan is the only woman candidate on the ballot. She is running for a two-year term on the board of assessors and is opposed by Augustus J. Doyle and Harry E. Baker.

Clarence A. Moore is a candidate for re-election to the board of assessors opposed by James B. Connolly. Dennis A. McCarthy, Alexander H. Rice and Clair E. Turner are seeking re-election to the school committee opposed by Winburn S. Cannell and Mortimer H. Wells.

Lexington faces a warm election with three candidates aspiring for the two vacancies on the board of selectmen. Selectman Francis Chamberlain, is up for re-election, opposed by Atty. Daniel J. O'Connell and Robert P. Trask.

Francis J. Kelley, chairman of the Bedford board of selectmen and the caucus nominee for re-election is opposed by Stillman G. Whittaker, who took out nominations after his defeat at the caucus.

Donald V. C. Bird and Louis E. Kenney are running on nomination papers for the office of town treasurer of Bedford.

The offices of selectmen, moderator, sewer commissioner and school committee will be contested for at the Dedham election. The polls at Dedham will be open until 7 p. m. this year instead of the early closing hour.

Drop Petitions of Marshfield Voters

Judge Pierce of Supreme Court today dismissed a petition of William G. Ford and other Marshfield voters for a writ of mandamus to compel Marshfield selectmen to insert two articles in the warrant for the annual town meeting.

The articles relate to acceptance by the town of a statute under which the police department may be placed under the civil service laws, and whether the acting chief of police may continue in office as chief.

Judge Pierce said nothing could be accomplished by the issuance of a writ as only two days remain before the town meeting.

Lost Her Son in Warfare

Mrs. Catherine Gavagan, Gold Star Mother, recalls that Tommy always played "sojer boy" as a child. He was little more than a child, 17, when he played the part in earnest for Uncle Sam. Tommy saw action in several major engagements, "went up" twice and was gassed. When he rejoined his outfit for a third grill in the front lines, he predicted to buddies that it would be three times and out. It was and Tommy met a hero's death on October 24, although the Armistice had been signed before his mother knew that he paid the supreme sacrifice. (Staff photo.)

'Sojer Boy' Killed in Action Over There

Mothers were the "second line of defense" in the World War, as in all wars. Now the government is going to send to France, that they may view the last resting place of their hero sons, the Gold Star mothers of America, those mothers whose sons made the supreme sacrifice. Today the Boston Evening American presents the fourth in a series of biographical sketches of heroes who gave their lives in the war—sketches made by the Gold Star mothers or widows themselves.

When Tommy Gavagan of Winthrop was a youngster living in Roxbury, he delighted in playing "sojer-boy."

Tommy carved guns and swords from wood and took them to bed with him at night.

Once the youngster organized a small war and captained an outfit in action. He longed for an opportunity to be a real soldier and the fulfillment of that ambition cost him his life.

This is the early background of a 17-year-old army veteran as related by his mother, Mrs. Catherine Gavagan of 953 Shirley st., formerly of Roxbury and Brookline.

Tommy was born in Yorkshire, England, of Irish parents, but he was brought to America early. Besides being an all round athlete, his greatest hobby was "soldiering."

Everyone liked Tommy. He was a good home boy but not so closely tied to the apron strings that he was a sissy. Anything but that for Tommy.

When the Armistice was announced, a big party was immediately planned in honor of his expected homecoming.

Word came a few weeks later of his having been killed in action on October 24.

This boy, a veteran of five major battles of the World War, and also a seasoned National Guardsman of Mexican border service, had a premonition of impending death.

"I've been over the top twice, boys, but it'll get me the third time," he told chums.

Once before Tommy had been wounded. He spent weeks in a hospital for treatment of gas poisoning early in 1918.

Tommy was unusually strong and large for his age, and "got away with it," when enlisting.

His mother wanted to get Tommy out of the army when the World War loomed, but the boy would have re-enlisted immediately.

The mother sent two sons to war, one of them, Joseph, serving in the navy.

This Gold Star mother is widely known in Legion and Auxiliary circles in Greater Boston. She is senior vice-president of the auxiliary in Roslindale to the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and is on the American Legion executive committee.

One of her duties is visiting veterans in hospitals.

"I like to feel that I am carrying on," she confessed.

Meanwhile, in this comfortable little home overlooking the seashore in Winthrop, perhaps history is repeating itself. Another little boy, a grandson this time—is playing soldier.

This youngster has the usual equipment of war toys, but has a large ambulance in addition.

The six-year-old soldier prob[illegible] ably will be in the next war, but not as a doughboy. If he has his way, it will be as an aviator.

MOTHERS now learn value of MAGNESIA

Because it is so helpful in keeping babies and children healthy and happy, every mother should know about Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

This harmless, almost tasteless preparation is most effective in relieving those symptoms of babies and children generally caused by souring food in the little digestive tract, such as sour-belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, colic. As a mild laxative, it acts gently, but certainly, to open the little bowels in constipation, colds, children's diseases.

A teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia does the work of half a pint of lime water in neutralizing cow's milk for infant feeding, and preventing hard curds. Its many uses for mother and child are fully explained in the interesting book "Useful Information." It will be sent you, FREE. Write The Phillips Co., 117 Hudson St., New York, N. Y.

SQUIRE SURE HE WILL BEAT GERMAN

By JACK SHARKEY
American Heavyweight Champion

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 28.—[illegible] can now [illegible] on Max Schmeling, German heavyweight champion.

I have already signed with Madison Square Garden Corporation to battle the German Dempsey at the Milk Fund Show in New York in June. If I knock out Schmeling as I did Tommy Loughran and Phil Scott nobody then can dispute my claim to the world's heavyweight championship.

I feel more confident that I can defeat Schmeling than I was that I would conquer Loughran or Scott. Loughran and Scott are much more experienced boxers than the German and figured to give me much trouble.

SCHMELING, of course, is a better puncher than Loughran or Scott, but I do not believe he has had sufficient experience to upset me [illegible] for the championship.

It was a terrific left hook to the body [illegible] the downfall of Scott. [illegible] in this session [illegible] British champion [illegible] after I connected with a left [illegible] the jaw. When Scott regained his feet he went on the defensive [illegible] waiting for an opening to put over a finishing punch.

When I pretended I was going to shoot a left hook to the jaw Scott lifted his guard. I then drove a left hook to the body. Every bit of power in my body was behind the blow. My gloved hand sunk deep into Scott's body. Phil kept on his feet, but I could see in an instant he was licked.

That is why I continued my body attack in the third round. Scott kept going away until finally I caught up with him and landed with a crushing left hook to the body. Phil toppled over but got up at the count of three.

THE British champion's eyes were glassy and it was apparent he could not weather the round. I kept crowding him and once again [illegible] into his body. Scott [illegible] around. I stepped in and [illegible] with a left hook which [illegible] the stomach, almost in the solar plexus. Scott crumpled under the punch. He was out on his feet and he sank to the canvas.

Once more he tried to claim foul, but this punch was so high that even his own handlers must have realized [illegible] claim.

[illegible] I remain on the [illegible] I can defeat Schmeling [illegible] I shall [illegible] of the rest of the foreign threat.

As [illegible] my ring policy of taking on all comers.

'He Fouled Me'---Scott 'K. O'd Him'---Sharkey

By JACK SHARKEY
Statement Made After His Victory Over Scott

Miami, Feb. 28—I will admit that it was a rather queer ending to a fight, but I guess there is no doubt that Phil was pretty well knocked out.

I was just feeling Scott out in the first round and in the second, I had no trouble in landing as often and where I wanted to. The ending in the third round was peculiar, I will admit, and I think Referee Magnolia gave Scott a break, at that. He gave Phil a rest.

But Phil was all in—and the bout was over. I am willing to fight anyone my manager may select for me this summer—preferably Max Schmeling.

And I think I can knock him out, too.

By PHIL SCOTT
Statement Made After He Was Knocked Out by Jack Sharkey

Miami, Feb. 28—If Sharkey had not fouled me—and he did it more than once—I think I would have won with plenty to spare.

I think I made Sharkey look like a novice in the first round. But after that there were some questionable blows, and I am free to admit that they slowed me up.

My plans for the future are indefinite. I would like to fight Sharkey again, but I doubt if this can be arranged.

I want to thank all of my American friends for the kindness they have shown me, and I am only sorry that the fight did not turn out as I expected it would—with a victory.

Scott Quit, Opinion of Most Sport Writers

FOLLOWING are the opinions of the nation's leading boxing writers on the Sharkey-Scott fight:

By Nick Flatley—It is the opinion of your correspondent that Phillip was hit low, with a left hook, in that third, after being dropped a couple of times with true punches. But Referee Lou Magnolia did not see any foul blow.

He called time to examine Philip, and then ordered the Englishman to go on fighting. Scott objected, but had to go back into action. He was flailed with a beautiful left hook, right in the pit of the stomach.

He did not go down, but clung to the ropes, shaking his head and making faces.

By Bill Corum, New York Evening Journal—Phil Scott quit again last night and this time it should be permanent. You can ignore all the stories of low punches, violations of rule, doctors' reports and what not. The cold facts remain that Scott quit. Thirty thousand fight fans thought so and thirty thousand fight fans can't be wrong.

By James W. Jennings, N. Y. Graphic—Magnolia disqualified Scott because the Britain fell to the canvas without being hit. Magnolia claims Scott was looking for an easy way out. Scott claims, and his claims are supported by two doctors, one the surgeon general of the United States Navy, that he fell to the canvas because his right leg was paralyzed by Sharkey's low blow to the hip that paralyzed the sciatic nerve.

By Don Skene, New York Herald Tribune—Phil Scott, the Swooning Swan of Soho, swooned all over the place as expected here tonight and lost a most complicated technical knockout to Jack Sharkey of Boston in 2:13 of the third round of a laughing scheduled 15-round heavyweight classic before [illegible] spectators at the new Madison Square Stadium.

By Fred Keats, Daily Mirror—Jack Sharkey earned the right to appear in the next battle for the heavyweight championship by knocking out Phil Scott, champion of England, in the third round before 30,000 disgusted fans here last night. Repeated claims of foul on the part of Scott and one actual low blow caused the affair to end up in a wild mix-up.

By James P. Dawson, New York Times—Phil Scott's weak [illegible] English [illegible] was [illegible] of Gene [illegible] crown when Jack Sharkey [illegible] who is recognized as America's best, knocked out Scott in the third round of what was to have been a 15-round bout.

By Damon Runyon, New York American—Phil Scott, champion of England, reclining limply against the ropes. He's down from a punch in the stomach. After being sunk once before from a very low punch in the right groin and taking a rest of a little over a minute on the stool in his corner, during which Louie Magnolia asks him if he wishes to come out and fight.

By Vincent Treanor, N. Y. World—Phil Scott, champion heavyweight of England, sat on a low strand of the velvet ropes in a neutral corner here last night and absolutely refused to continue his fight with Jack Sharkey. Pain aplenty was seen on his face, and for the third time in the three rounds the fighter [illegible] he was claiming foul.

By Jack Farrell, N. Y. Daily News—Good old fragile Phil Scott upheld the English heavyweight traditions by quitting cold in the third round of his scheduled 15-round battle here tonight in the New Madison Sq. Garden open air stadium. Philip gave a perfect imitation of puss in the corner after getting a swipe in the belly and he resigned as everybody figured he would.

By Lou Magnolia, referee of the Sharkey-Scott bout. I stopped the fight between Jack Sharkey and Phil Scott here last night and awarded it to Sharkey on a technical knockout in the third round because Scott would not go on fighting.

There was no foul punch that dropped Scott at any time during the nearly three rounds that the affair lasted. Every blow with which Sharkey dropped the English champion was landed in fair territory.

Garden Loses Money on Sharkey-Scott Heavy Clash

Miami, Fla., Feb. 28—Jack Sharkey and Phil Scott drew 18,600 paid admissions and a "gate" of $181,000 net, or $190,000 gross in their fight here. So the annual battle of the palpitating palms was a financial failure to the Garden.

Of the receipts, Sharkey will receive a little more than $40,000 and Scott around $32,000. The preliminary bouts cost the Garden $32,000, and the operating expenses were so heavy that the final figures will be written in red ink.

"Scott Quit"—Tunney "Scott's a Bum"—Stribling

Miami, Feb. 28. Gene Tunney, retired heavyweight champion and W. L. Stribling, who fought Sharkey at Miami a year ago, were brief in their comments on the bout.

"Scott quit," said Tunney.

"Scott's a bum," said Stribling.

And that's that.

SHARKEY PUTS SCOTT OUT IN THIRD

Englishman Floored Twice in Fast Battle; Tries to Claim a Foul

By NICK FLATLEY

Miami, Fla., Feb. 28.—Jack Sharkey, Newton squire, has belted his way to a crack at the world heavyweight title. The squire realized the ambition of five disappointing years, when he brushed swooning Phillip Scott out of the path, under the [illegible] Florida stars.

[illegible] the [illegible] body [illegible] series of left hooks that caused Phillip to fold up like a tent and make his usual bleat of foul.

The fight was one for the book. Phillip passed out of the picture in the third, the strangest round in all the records. The sad looking Britisher had been knocked down for a count of six in the second. He had been given a boxing lesson in the first.

A [illegible] Sharkey was out to [illegible] a kayo. His lightning left [illegible] cracked and bounced around the Scott body. The result was inevitable. Scott couldn't hit Sharkey and couldn't save himself from [illegible] punishment.

It is the opinion of your correspondent that Phillip was hit low, with a left hook, in that third, after being dropped a couple of times with true punches. But Referee Lou Magnolia did not see any foul blow.

He called time to examine Philip, and then ordered the Englishman to go on fighting. Scott objected, but had to go back into action. He was flailed with a beautiful left hook, right in the pit of the stomach.

He did not go down, but clung to the ropes, shaking his head and making faces.

SHARKEY THE WINNER

Magnolia grabbed Sharkey's arm and elevated it, while managers and seconds and police stormed into the ring to prevent possible trouble. Sharkey was raving like a wild man at Scott, defying him to get up and fight.

Jack, who thought he had been disqualified on a foul, was crying like a child and jumping up and down like a maniac. He saw the golden opportunity slipping, after he had hammered his foe helpless.

But Magnolia had the say so and his ruling went.

So Jack Sharkey will fight Max Schmeling in June and have an [illegible] gates [illegible].

The wails and protests of Johnny Johnston and Phil [illegible] filling the [illegible] decision is a decision, and complaints can not change it.

Scott has been fouled too often and though we think he was hit low once it was not a devastating punch and Magnolia was right when he ordered the fight to continue.

"I was watching closely for fouls," he explained, "and did not see a low punch struck. The punches that knocked Scott down were all in the body, but all were well above the danger line. When Scott claimed a foul I had to give time and called in the physician. We could find no sign of damage.

"So I ordered the fight to go on, and when Scott refused to come up after Sharkey had hit him a hard left in the body I had to give the fight to Sharkey."

That ends an unusual scrap, but the better fighter won. There was no possible doubt of that. Sharkey can lick Scott a couple of times any evening and deserves his big shot.

WIN THRILLS SHARKEY

Jack was wildly excited last night, but was his usual calm self this morning.

"I was ready to jump into the ocean when I thought that Scott was going to get away with that foul stuff. I know that all my blows were legitimate, because I knew the Scott reputation and was being careful to keep my punches up. I knew I had him when I got him in that second round. He is weak in the body, so naturally I made that my target."

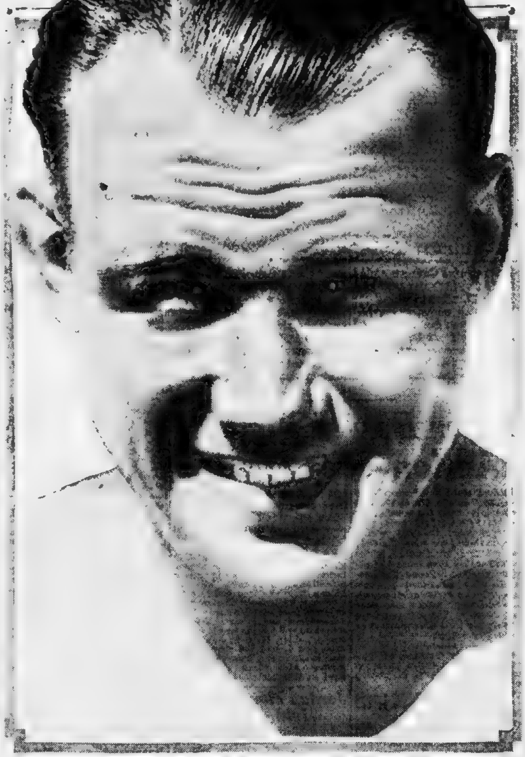
Scott was still limping today to prove that he has been hurt, but it all makes no difference.

The fight with the strange round had all the kicks of a movie thriller. The crowd was with Sharkey, and booed swooning Phil as he put his act on. He did appear badly injured afterward, but it was from a legitimate pasting.

Talkative James Johnston is screeching about suits, and reversal of the decision, for which he can't be blamed much. His swooning swan cost him a large section of $1,000,000, and he's naturally perturbed. But all he will get is the horse laugh and a few thousand columns of publicity.

Sharkey will remain for several more weeks in Miami, while Phillip will return to Merrie Old England as soon as his infuriated manager gets through using him as the dummy in his ventriloquist act.

CLAIMS HEAVYWEIGHT TITLE



Jack Sharkey of Chestnut Hill, given the verdict in his contest with Phil Scott of England at Miami, Fla., is said to have delivered a foul blow that paralyzed the legs of his rival. The Boston man's next fight is with Max Schmeling, in New York in June, for the benefit of the Hearst Milk Fund. In spite of Scott's cry of foul, Sharkey claims the heavyweight title.

Phil Scott Refused to Continue Fight

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 28—There's Phil Scott, champion of England, reclining limply against the ropes in a neutral corner in the third round of his fight with Jack Sharkey of Boston, his watery blue eyes rolling in his head, his pale features contorted in pain.

He's gone down from a punch in the stomach, after being sunk once before from a very low punch to the right groin and taking a rest of a little over a minute on the stool in his corner, during which Referee Louie Magnolia asks him if he wishes to come out and fight.

Now he hangs across the ropes, Referee Magnolia again bends over him.

"Do you wish to continue?" he asks.

"No," says Scott. "I am knocked out."

The bell rings, but the fight is over under these strange circumstances. Scott still squats in the ropes in a neutral corner, his pale features working. Sharkey rushes over to him and snarls something, then runs back to is own corner while his seconds gather around him to fend off some enthusiasts trying to climb into the ring.

THERE is a babble of voices in Sharkey's corner during the wait after the second round. Scott is down on his haunches in Sharkey's corner, blowing the resin dust out of his nostrils to a count of six in the second. Buckley, manager of Sharkey, says, "Go on in and finish it up." Sharkey snarls a brief answer. Here's the bell and Sharkey skips over to Scott and Scott grabs him in a clinch.

"I'll disqualify that man," Magnolia says to Johnson, according to Johnston himself, as Scott is assisted to his corner, and sits on his stool, his face twisted up.

But the Magnolia version is different.

"I will call a doctor into the ring, but I am going to tell him no low blow was struck," he says he said.

"I will let Scott continue if you will disqualify that man the next time he hits low," says Johnston.

Magnolia turns and motions Sharkey to continue the fight and Scott limps painfully out of his corner, like Uncle Tom in his cabin.

"Whang," a belt to Scott's stomach from Sharkey's water-soaked glove. It seems fair enough. This is where Scott hangs himself across the ropes, and the fight ends.

Blackhawks Hang on to Second Place

New York, Feb. 28 (INS) The Chicago Black Hawks today still shared second place with the New York Rangers in the American group of the National Hockey League. A game last night figured to decide second position ended an overtime one to one tie.

The Rangers tried and tried but they couldn't dent the Hawks superb defense.

HARVARD SIX MEETS YALE

With every man in perfect condition, the Harvard hockey squad rested awaiting the first game with Yale at New Haven tomorrow.

In its last practice session, the Crimson battled 40 minutes with the world's champion Bruins, and Joe Stubbs was pleased with the fight his charges showed.

Despite the fact that Harvard will face one of the greatest college hockey teams ever assembled, the Crimson is far from nervous about tomorrow night's ice battle.

Yale has taken 16 games in a row. It has piled up over 100 goals to its opponents' 23. It has beaten clubs which have trimmed Harvard.

Still the Cambridge sextet is undismayed, for it knows that this is a Yale game, in which anything can happen.

Stubbs plans to start Wood, Bobby Giddens and Elliot Putnam in the forward line for Harvard tomorrow night. Bobby Giddens has proved a life saver in Harvard's games ever since he returned to the team and may be the deciding factor in the coming tilt with Yale.

With Ding Palmer playing opposite the Canadian, the fans who will cram the New Haven rink are in for an evening of fireworks. The Yale wing is lightning fast on the runners, while Giddens' specialty is stick handling.

A year ago, these two practically decided the H Y series themselves, and the feud is not yet settled.

Harvard must rely on its wealth of subs if it hopes to win over Yale's great outfit. Wood's line will be alternated constantly with Garrison's trio, which has the Newton flash at center, Junie Stubbs on one wing and Johnnie Cross on the other.

SHARKEY SAYS HEAVY TITLE IS HIS

By JACK CONWAY

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Feb. 28.—Jack Sharkey today claimed the world's heavyweight championship in a fiery statement issued by Johnny Buckley, manager of the American champion.

Buckley says Sharkey's three-round victory over Scott eliminates all of the contestants who had the courage to enter a ring with him. He calls attention to the fact Max Schmeling, German heavyweight, ran out of a bout with Sharkey in Detroit last summer and so has discredited himself.

Buckley says that when Schmeling boxes Sharkey in New York in June for the Milk Fund he will have to enter the ring as a challenger to the champion.

"I claim the world's championship for Sharkey," said Buckley in his statement. "I do not believe it is necessary for Sharkey to defeat any other challenger to be recognized as head of his boxing division.

RECOGNIZED HERE

"I received a message today from Eugene Buckley, veteran member of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission, in which he declared Sharkey is the world's champion.

"Sharkey has beaten every outstanding heavyweight who has crossed his fistic path.

"Sharkey is prepared to go through with his bout with Max Schmeling of Germany for the Milk Fund in New York in June, but I do not believe it is necessary for the American champion to defeat Max before being proclaimed champion. Schmeling was signed to meet Sharkey in Detroit last summer, but failed to go through with the match.

"When Schmeling meets Sharkey in June it will be as challenger to the champion. Sharkey has beaten every man the public has asked him to meet and now stands supreme in the heavyweight division.

JACK IS SUPREME

"The Scott bout proved that the ordinary run of heavyweights cannot stand up under Sharkey's terrific punching ability. The blow that dropped the British champion for a count of six in the second round was a straight left to the face. Few heavyweights can drop an opponent with such a punch.

"The next three knockdowns were scored with left hooks to the body. The punch which hung Scott on the ropes and caused him to say to Lou Magnolia, 'I am knocked out,' was a smashing left hook to the solar plexus. It was the same kind of a punch with which Bob Fitzsimmons knocked out Jim Corbett at Carson City in their bout for the heavyweight championship of the world.

"Sharkey has now knocked out Loughran and Scott and I feel he will also stop Schmeling when he defends his title against the German."

MILLION-DOLLAR GATE

It is expected that the Sharkey-Schmeling bout will restore the million-dollar gate to the boxing game. It is a "natural" which has been hanging fire for more than a year.

The youthful Teuton smashed his way to the front in the boxing game by knocking out Johnny Risko and scoring a decisive victory over Paulino at the Milk Fund show last June.

Complications with the New York boxing commission over contracts entered into by Arthur Buelow, his deposed German manager, caused Schmeling to return to Germany.

Schmeling refused to go through with a contract to box Scott.

William Muldoon, veteran member of the New York boxing commission, then declared that Sharkey, Schmeling and Scott must fight it out for the title.

Sharkey declared he would take on both Scott and Schmeling. He was successful in eliminating the first of the two men in their bout here.

Sharkey is today some $10,000 richer as a result of his win over Scott. The American champion was so eager to get Scott out of his path that he consented to box here on a percentage basis rather than demanding a $100,000 guarantee, such as he received for his bouts with Stribling and Loughran last year.

BEARS NO MARKS

Sharkey is today unmarked as a result of his engagement with Scott. The British champion hit him with one good punch, a right hand to the chin, which landed in the middle of the second round.

Scott, while a good boxer, was no match for Sharkey when it came to open fighting. The British champion went down four times before he folded up in a neutral corner and announced he was unable to continue boxing.

A left hook to the jaw was a-

The alleged foul punch disrupted the sciatic nerve and rendered Scott's legs useless, he said. After the fight pins were stuck in Scott's legs and he declared he did not feel them.

Dr. Stokes said Scott had been fouled and the nerves of his legs temporarily paralyzed.

Nick Flatley, sports editor of the Boston American who covered the fight from ringside, said that in his opinion the English champion had been hit low with a left hook that Magnolia did not see.

Flatley [illegible] statement [illegible] that he did not believe the blow a devastating one and that the referee was right when he ordered the fight continued although [illegible]

An International News Service correspondent found Scott lying prone on his dressing table. He was feeling dreadful, he said.

"I was hurt badly. I was hit low half a dozen times at least," he claimed. "I can't understand how they get away with it. I simply can't.

"The only reason I [illegible] back in there against Sharkey after being fouled was because I didn't want them to think I was yellow. I think I showed that I had real British grit in me, but if you can't stand up, why you just can't stand up."

Scott's explosive little manager, Johnston, orated all over the place, talking to everybody, fight reporters and spectators alike, anybody who would listen to him. Johnston said:

"I have never seen in my long connection with the boxing game a decision as raw as this. Magnolia will never referee another major contest in this country, if I can help it. I called the turn several days ago when I said they would try to beat Scott out of the fight on a technicality without counting him out.

Indrisano Picked to Beat Hull at Garden

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 28—Jack Conway today picked Johnny Indrisano of East Boston, to win over Clyde Hull in their 10-round bout at the Boston Garden tonight. I believe Indrisano will win on points tonight. Conway fattened his average in Miami.

He picked Sharkey to stop Scott. He did. Named Maloney to upset Moise Bouquillon. He did. Conway named Loughran to outpoint Pierre Charles. He did. Jack picked Raoul Bianci to beat Big Bill Daring. WIND UPSETS PLANS OF SOX BOSS

By JOE CASHMAN

PENSACOLA, Fla., Feb. 28—The fast pace which the Red Sox travelled during the final six weeks of last season didn't get the club anywhere in the race, but it had a most beneficial effect, just the same. It strengthened the morale of the outfit considerably.

The last few springs, an air of hopelessness was ever in evidence in camp. The veterans seemed to feel that they were doomed always to be failures and it didn't take the rookies long to get the same idea and lose confidence.

It is different this year. The regulars who ran roughshod over all opposition towards the finish of the 1929 campaign are strutting around like champions. They feel that what they did before, they can do again and they are going about their training with pep and enthusiasm.

The rookies, always [illegible] to follow the example of their more experienced mates are following suit.

As a result, everything is progressing famously down here in Pensacola, and it appears at even this early date as though the Sox would start in a better frame of mind this season than for several years.

NO BATTING PRACTICE

And, unless something happens in the early stages of the race to cause them to lose their present great faith in themselves, they are going to be far more formidable than they have been of recent years, for a club that has the will to win is mighty hard to beat, regardless of its strength.

Manager Wagner didn't hold the initial batting drill yesterday as he had planned. The wind was a little strong and he feared that some of the pitchers might develop sore arms throwing 'em up to the batters.

So he made the twirlers confine their efforts to practicing throwing from the mound and chasing flies in the outfield.

DON'T KNOW RULES

Several of the rookies showed an ignorance of the big league rule which prohibits taking more than one step in delivering the ball to the batter, and Coach Jack McAllister was kept busy showing them how to wind up properly.

Today, if the wind calms down the first batting practice will be held and things will liven up. The players don't get much of a kick just throwing the ball back and forth, engaging in pep games, chasing flies and running marathons around the park.

They all love to bat, though, and show a lot more interest in their work when they are given an opportunity to take a cut at that old apple.

Manager Wagner remarked before going out to the park that he hoped batting practice would be possible, so he could get a peek at Ben Shields and George Smith in action.

He said that both these lads impressed him as mighty fine prospects in preliminary work and that he was anxious to get a further line on them.

SHIELDS HAS EXPERIENCE

Such statements coming from Heine mean much. He isn't inclined to talk freely and very rarely comments on the good or bad points of this player or that.

Both Shields and Smith must have looked mighty good to have him mention their names. These two boys have one thing in their favor, at any rate. They have both seen service in the big show before. They may fade out of the picture before training ends but at this writing they appear to be the best of the new crop of hurlers.

Others who promise to make the grade in time, if not this season, are Bob Kline, Frank Mulrooney, Franklin Milliken and Huey Harmon.

Both Horace Powers and Fred Bradley, the new catchers, are good looking rookies, but it is very unlikely that either will beat out Eddie Connolly and Bob Asby, the experienced youngsters, this season.

Full Squad of Braves in Camp by Tomorrow

St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 28—Before the sun at St. Petersburg sun drops into the Gulf of Mexico tomorrow evening, the complete tribe of the Braves should be housed in the wigwam, at the West Coast Inn. Friday is the day set for the reporting of the full squad and from now on, Bill McKechnie will get down to business.

There is one reservation. Smiling Jimmy Welsh, who may still smile a happy smile, but not at Judge Fuchs. For Jimmy is a bit peeved at his salary cut and has promised to do everything but play ball for the Braves this coming season.

The two latest arrivals are Randy Moore, who slipped in with Mrs. Moore, in the wee small hours of the morning, and Tracy Hart.

Moore was the leading swatsmith of the Texas League last year and if his hitting against fast ones, in today's practice session, is any indication, he will be an asset to the 1930 Braves. He takes a mean cut at the ball and sent some screeching liners to the distant places.

Hart is a young pitcher from Claremont, N. H., who was given a tryout by the Cardinals last spring. He showed a bit of promise and was placed on one of the St. Louis farms.

But he became sick early in the season and was forced to give up the game. He was given his unconditional release and this year cast his lot with the Braves.

McKechnie has made quite a hit with the folks in St. Pete. His business-like manner of conducting the workouts impresses folks with the thought that he knows what it's all about.

B. U. FIVE PLAYS ALUMNI TEAM

Boston University's varsity and freshman basketball quintets will swing into action for the second time this week when the varsity tackles the alumni and the yearlings clash with the Wentworth Institute five in the St. Botolph st. gym tonight.

The varsity-alumni game should produce plenty of fireworks with the former Terrier stars trying to down the 1930 B. U. varsity. The alumni will be represented by an experienced bunch of hoopsters who have proved their worth on the St. Botolph st. floor many times in their undergraduate days. Hank August, Dumpy Halliday, Paul Cotter, Pete Sothere and Glen O'Brien will play for the grads.

Win Karlson will rely on his regular lineup of Marino and Berry, forwards; Nuns, center; Stearn and Tripp, guards. These boys have yet to suffer a defeat this winter on their own floor and will be favored to take the alumni into camp but not without a battle.

The Terrier Cubs will meet Wentworth for the second time this winter. On the occasion of their first meeting early in January, the B. U. youngsters came out on top and although not quite so strong now as then, the yearling team composed of McConnell and Kalliher, forwards; Epstein, center, and Semino and Molyneau, guards, should give the Wentworth crowd a good battle with an even chance of coming out on top.

Vermont Loses

Burlington, Vt., Feb. 28—Norwich defeated Vermont, 28 to 27. A foul by Holmes in the closing second of an overtime period won the game for Norwich.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON, Golf's Greatest Teacher

Progress in golf is attained not so much through conquering the game as from conquering yourself.

SEE YOUR SWING AS A WHOLE

To become a good golfer you first must know what a good golf swing is—what it looks like, how it is made, that is the smoothness and general expression of it and what it does. I take it that the land couldn't produce a golfer who didn't know these things, therefore what's his first step into the correct mental aspect? The first step is to see yourself as making such a swing. Think of the swing action as a whole, not as something in 10,000 pieces and sections. There certainly is nothing connected with the easy, natural swinging of a golf club that you could not duplicate—and most assuredly you can picture yourself doing it in your imagination. Picturing yourself so, you set up a goal. This sort of a swing, imagined, will bring about a reaction within you that will have surprising effect. If you know how to look like a golfer, you begin there, and with each swing you can determine that you will try to swing as your imagination has pictured, regardless of immediate result. Try it.

Red Sox Give Lamar Bell a Tryout

Mobile, Ala., Feb. 28—Through the effort of Russell (Red) Rollings, former Mobile Bear, Lamar Bell, local semipro catcher, has been granted a tryout with the Boston Red Sox. During the 1929 season Bell played with the McDonald George team of the major league in Mobile and hit for an average of 400. Bell is six feet tall, 18 years old and tips the beam at 178 pounds. He will report at the Red Sox camp at Pensacola Saturday. Rollings, who was due at the Braves' camp at St. Petersburg yesterday, will leave within the next few days. He has been suffering with a heavy cold.

Frank Van Beats Jim Ivory at Billiards

At the State Theater Club last night, Frank Van won the play-off from Jim Ivory of Jamaica Plain in the New England three-cushion class B championship, 25-to-18. Ivory won his way into the final by handing Van his first defeat in nine starts, 25-to-9.

In the playoff for third prize Dan Sullivan of New Bedford sprung the surprise of the tournament when he came from behind to beat Stig Linton of Boston, 25-to-22.

MAKE YOUR SWEETHEART FEAR TO LOSE YOU

His Mother Should Not Try to Delay Marriage

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marraige.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I am 26 years old, although everybody tells me I look younger, and have been engaged to be married for five years. But my wedding day is no nearer than it ever has been, and I implore your advice. We live in the country. My two older sisters are married, and, as my brothers live at home, I give all my time to helping my mother with the housework and cooking.

Beatrice Fairax

You would think that they would let me go, or that I could marry and my husband could come here. But his mother is an invalid and jealous, and does not want him to marry until she dies. G. comes to see me two or three times a week, and sometimes we go out in my parents' car. I adore dancing, and I love music, too; but G. does not care much about taking me to dances.

The waiting has been terrible, for I am truly in love with him. But I would wait even longer if I were sure he really wanted marriage. Does he or shall I break the engagement?

COUNTRY GIRL.

DEAR COUNTRY GIRL:

Your letter makes me eager to help you, but, at the same time, I am just a little indignant that you should have had to come to me for help.

It is a mother who is in the best position to prevent such a situation as yours from ever arising but your own dear mother has been, I am afraid, rather short-sighted in her love for you and need of you at home. Otherwise she would have insisted before this that your lover claim you or make way for someone else.

Yet the person really at fault is of course G.'s own mother, who ought not to be allowed to dominate him a day longer. Otherwise, when she does die—and the day may be far distant—he will be fatally weakened in will power.

Mothers who proceed as she has done, are often unconsciously selfish. And until your G. realizes his responsibility to you I am afraid he will not be an entirely satisfactory lover or husband.

But since you love him and wish to marry him, I advise you not to break your engagement yet but to adopt a new "line" and keep to it until G. begins to fear to lose you. Break away and pay a visit to one or both of your married sisters.

Dance a little with the first agreeable young man who is nice to you and shares your very natural dance-hunger. You will say that these are ancient tactics but I believe they will be effectual and that G. will gradually see, without any explanation from you (don't make any, I beg of you!), that he must marry you or do without you.

There is always the chance, however, that his mother will prove so much stronger than you, or than he, that the little comedy I am proposing will not lead up to the desired last act. You may lose G., after all. But that will be better, dear Country Girl, than acquiescing in five more years of an engagement with no wedding in sight.

And in that case you would be free to receive the advances of some impetuous lover who no doubt is waiting in the background even now.

"All the World for Somebody" -:- Drawn by Nell Brinkley

WHAT'S all the world to Jack is no thrill in the life of Jimmy. What Jimmy dreams of and holds dear, Jack would take as a sure cure for insomnia. Jack puzzles his head under his smart derby to find out for himself why Jimmy holds one certain thing so precious, and gabbles about it when the other fellow stops to breathe. Jimmy feels gently contemptuous of Jack's valuables, the things that make Jack's eyes light up, his cheeks grow warm, his tongue stutter and his speech childish. Jack views Jimmy's priceless precocities with a lifted brow and thinks him a funny fellow—"to care so much for that!"

"All the world" to me. "All the world" to you. How different your jewel is to mine! What Glorette suffers over and for is no more than the breeze from a gnat's wing to Ann. The scientist broods over and finds the whole world of God in the fairy delicacy and the mystery of the same gnat's wing. His joy is in wondering, searching, some rare times—finding! But Bill Dumbfellow doesn't even see the gnat. It only bites him on his fishing trips! But he thinks a heap of the noisy little Summer resort that he can afford—and the little butter-color haired baby girl that hangs to his big thumb. Me? I like both the scientist and the Dumb-fellow, if they both have a heart in them.

Beside me sits a dear, funny little German music-box. It tinkles out for you when you are in the mood a little lullaby of a frail, perishing beauty. It is made in the form of a round, green world of grass, mountains and golden stars. On the top of it, in content, on a world-big daisy head, sits a funny little pig-tailed mother beside a doll-like baby, set about with toys. She seems, she and her baby, lifted above the world, into the heaven where mothers and funny babies play.

Act Quickly in Croup

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

U. S. Senator from New York.

Former Commissioner of Health New York City

THERE are some things which always strike terror to the heart of a mother. The very mention of [illegible]

Dr. Copeland

[illegible] attacks a [illegible] between the ages of two and [illegible] usually [illegible] with what seems like a [illegible], possibly with some fever. At other times there [illegible] at all but a sudden attack after a child gets [illegible] night.

In a sudden attack [illegible] is awakened gasping for breath. He has slight barking cough. This cough is peculiar in that it has metallic sounding, with a sort of ringing noise. The child has the greatest difficulty in getting his breath. The mucous membrane is so swollen that there is scarcely room for a bit of air to get through.

The child becomes feverish and the pulse is rapid. The difficult breathing usually frightens the child so much that he wants to be taken up and carried.

Heroic measures must be taken to relieve the swelling of the membrane of the throat. The first thing to do is to send for a doctor, and, while awaiting his coming, the child should be put into a hot bath at a temperature of about 100 degrees. Be careful not to have the water so hot as to scald the child. Try the heat of the water on your own elbow. The child should be kept in the bath from 15 to 20 minutes. At the same time apply cold compresses to its throat.

Sometimes a hot footbath into which a teaspoonful of mustard has been added, is advisable to draw the blood from the upper part of the body, giving relief to the sufferer.

It is wise to give an emetic in the form of syrup of ipecac, or syrup of squills in order to produce vomiting and relieve the gathering of mucus in the throat.

As the dreaded croup is really a dangerous disease, your doctor is needed because he will know what to do. There is also a treatment known as "intubation," in which a tube is inserted into the throat through the mouth so that the child may breathe.

As croup is diphtheritic, the patient should be isolated.

Problem of Entertaining

"ALMOST all of us enjoy "having company," especially if we are wise enough to plan our refreshments ahead and choose something that can be prepared well in advance of the party.

Martha Lee.

Bridge parties are undoubtedly the most popular modern form of entertainment and, whether the refreshments are served before or after the game, they can conveniently be placed at the bridge tables at which the guests are seated.

Individual Charlotte Russe with sponge cake or lady fingers makes an attractive and popular dessert, made by this recipe.

INDIVIDUAL CHARLOTTE RUSSE

1¼ cups milk
2 tbsps. butter
½ cup brown sugar
2 eggs
¼ tsp. salt
½ tsp. vanilla
1 cup (½ pint) cream, whipped
Sponge cake or lady fingers

Soak gelatine in cold water about five minutes. Melt butter, add brown sugar and cook together for a few minutes. Scald milk and add gradually to beaten yolks of eggs. Add the cooked brown sugar and salt. Cook entire mixture over boiling water (top of double boiler for mixture) until custard begins to thicken. Add soaked gelatine and stir thoroughly. Beat egg whites with wire whisk until stiff and light, and fold into custard. Cool custard by setting pan in larger pan of ice cubes or ice water, stirring occasionally to prevent lumpiness. When thickening add whipped cream and vanilla. Line sherbet glasses with strips of sponge cake or with lady fingers, leaving small space between pieces. Fill sherbet glass with chilled mixture. Decorate on top with smaller pieces of cake and set glasses aside in cold place until ready to serve. Just before serving add a spoonful of whipped cream on top of each as a final touch of garnish.

PINEAPPLE NUT SOUFFLE

1 level tbsp. gelatine
¼ cup cold water
2 tbsps. lemon juice
¾ cup canned crushed pineapple
½ cup sugar.
½ cup cream, whipped
3 eggs
⅛ tsp. salt
½ cup nuts cut in small pieces.

Soak gelatine in cold water about 5 minutes. Separate egg yolks and egg whites. Beat yolks slightly, add lemon juice, sugar and salt. Cook in top of double boiler until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Remove from stove and add soaked gelatine and pineapple, stirring ingredients in well. Allow to cool and when custard begins to thicken fold in egg whites which have been beaten light and stiff; and whipped cream. Add nuts, leaving a few whole nut meats for garnishing. Rinse out individual molds in cold water and fill with mixture. Chill molds in cold place. To serve, unmold on dessert plates and garnish with spoonful of whipped cream, pieces of canned pineapple and whole nut meats.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

Lovejoy -:- An Intensely Interesting Serial by Beatrice Burton

Tom asked her with cutting sarcasm. "Afraid to sign his name to his telegrams!"

Lovejoy was shivering all over as if there were snow outside the windows instead of summer moonlight. "Tom," she said in a voice that shook, "Tom, I know that you think that telegram was sent to me by Steve Oglebay—"

"Why certainly I do!" Tom broke in. "I admit that I'm a blind fool but I have sense enough to know that those are his initials. Give me credit for a few brains, Lovejoy."

She shook her head. "Tom, I know you won't believe me but that telegram was for Aline. A man named Sam Oliver sent it to her. He met her at our house the day before Hilda left. Do you remember that cigar band that you found? The one I told you had been left there by a man from the furniture store? — Well Sam Oliver left it there!"

He just looked at her for a few seconds. Then he said quietly.

"I knew you were lying the night you told me that tale about the cigar band. I knew that it's only men like Oglebay who can afford fifty cent cigars."

Lovejoy began to cry.

"Tom, that cigar wasn't Steve's," she sobbed. "That Oliver man left it in the house, honestly he did!—Tom, please look at those letters! You'll see that they were not written to me! Please take them out and read them!"

There was an awful gentleness in [illegible] as he took the two letters out of their envelopes. He spread them out on the card table and looked them over.

"[illegible] the first one started out [illegible] from [illegible] for [illegible]. Nothing to cheer me up but the last one, and I've worn that one out reading it. If you knew what a letter from you means to me you'd keep your promise to write to me every day."

There were three more paragraphs all in the same vein.

But there was not a word to show who had written them or to whom they had been written.

"They're Aline's letters, though," Lovejoy said stubbornly, looking through the second letter, which was just like the first one. "The man who wrote them is named 'Jack,' and he lives in South Port and drives down here to see her sometimes—Tom, if Steve Oglebay wrote to me he wouldn't mail his letters from South Port, would he?"

Tom shrugged his big shoulders. "Yes, he probably would," he said dully. "When two people are carrying on a clandestine love affair they usually do things like that. Mailing letters from out of the way towns and writing them with a typewriter so that they can't be identified by the handwriting—"

He pushed his chair back from the table with sudden violence and stood up, his shoulders squared, his hands in his pockets.

"Well," he said with energy, "I guess this is just about the end of things for you and me, isn't it?"

"Why?" Lovejoy could hardly speak. "Don't you believe me, Tom?" She got out what she had to say in little sobbing jerks.

Tom sneered. "I'm not crazy," he said brutally. "Who'd believe a cock and bull story like the one you've just told me? You don't think I'm such an idiot as to believe there's anybody named Sam Oliver, do you?"

Lovejoy opened her trembling lips to speak, but he stopped her.

"Anyhow you've admitted that you used to go out to meet Steve Oglebay at night!" he said. "And if you think I'm going to live with a woman who does things like that you don't know me! —I'm all—through—with you!"

Teach the Boy Housework

By LUCY LOWELL

THEY arrived unexpectedly at my friend's home the other Sunday morning. There was the father and mother and the children, a girl of twelve and her brother, a year older.

Lucy Lowell

In a flurry my friend betook herself to the kitchen.

Then she overheard a little conversation between the brother and the sister. "Your turn, Francis. I helped mother last night."

"Righto," said the boy, and presented himself in the kitchen.

In a business like way he rolled up his sleeves, found a knife and began to make ready a pan of potatoes for boiling.

Not only did he manage the potatoes but he also prepared the salad with the dressing, made a cream sauce, cut the cake and made coffee the like of which my friend declared she never had tasted before.

"Well," she told the world when at the end of a half hour everybody was gathered about the table. "Well! I've seen something new under the sun. A man isn't all thumbs and elbows in the kitchen!"

The boy's mother stated her opinion that not only girls but boys as well should be taught the rudiments of housekeeping.

"Even if they never have to use their knowledge in a practical way it's useful to them. Francis and his sister began to do little things about the house when they were tiny children and now either of them can run the house as well as I can."

The family, my friend says, has the happiest home she knows. All of which leads me to wonder if this method might not furnish other mothers with an idea.

Proper to Use Salad Fork

By MRS. BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS BEECKMAN

1—If a cake at a tea were too soft for the fingers, would it be all right to pass small, broad salad forks to eat it with, as my dessert forks are rather large? Or would it be better to serve cakes which can be eaten without forks.

2—Would you be good enough to explain fully the correct usage of service plates? Should they be used at informal dinner parties or at only formal dinners?

3—When guests come to a small home and the maid answers the door, should she take the guests upstairs and show the gentleman where to hang his coat downstairs before the host and hostess appear from the living room, or is it all right for the hostess to come out of the living room a few seconds after the door is opened and direct the guests, or would it be better for the maid to direct the lady guests and the host to come out to look after the men?

MRS. W.
Belmont.

1—This would be a most convenient service and perfectly correct for the slices of cake that you mention. The salad forks are most convenient for this.

2—Service plates are formal details and are usually used at only formal dinners and luncheons. However, if, as often happens, the service at a more or less informal dinner or luncheon they can be used, too, on these occasions.

3—In a small home of the kind you mention the hostess, or both the hostess and host would probably come quite soon from the living room, or wherever they are, and help the guests with their wraps. The maid, in the meantime, would be beginning the service, and would indicate to the guests where they are expected to leave their wraps.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

MARRIAGE, like Colonial furniture, may be old fashioned and not always comfortable, but, somehow, nobody has ever invented anything to improve on it.

Before smoking and golf were introduced, murder was the favorite morning pastime and most popular outdoor sport. There was simply no outlet for a man's excess energy, inhibitions and complexes except fighting.

It is almost as hard for some men to get along with only one flirtation a season as it would be for them to get along with only one white evening tie.

A man is not getting middle-aged until he gives up polo for golf and cigarettes for a pipe, and prefers rubber heels to French heels on a woman around the house.

When love, like liquor, is highly diluted and passed around indiscriminately, it loses half the flavor, all the bouquet, and most of the kick.

A man loves a woman only as long as she is lovable; but a woman is supposed to go on automatically loving her husband until the judge tells her to stop.

The girl with sex-appeal may get almost any man on her list, but it's the woman with emotional appeal who gets his name on a marriage certificate.

The modern girl usually hitches her wagon to a star job or a star career—and then looks around for a husband to act as a parachute in case the star should fall.

The less a woman talks about anything the more a man suspects she knows about it.

A Lothario prides himself on the number of his conquests, but it is far easier for a man to fool one woman after another than it is for him to go on fooling the same woman forever.

Declares 15 per cent of industrial accidents due to defects in lighting as result of poor intensity, glare and bad distribution.

COPPER AND LEAD MOVEMENTS

Imports of copper in unmanufactured form by the United States totaled 35,695 metric tons (2204.6 pounds) in January against 28,488 tons in December and 32,941 tons in November, according to American Bureau of Metal Statistics. Imports by Great Britain amounted to 9193 tons in January against 13,685 tons in December and 11,430 tons in November.

WOULD CUT VENEZUELAN OUTPUT

Pres. Richard Airey of Asiatic Petroleum Co., Ltd., a Shell subsidiary has received advices from abroad to the effect that the Royal Dutch-Shell group is prepared to join in any movement to reduce Venezuelan crude oil production in 1930, compared with 1929 proportionately with an average reduction in the United States on the same basis.

AMALGAMATED LEATHER PROFITS

Amalgamated Leather Companies, Inc., and subsidiary companies, report for year ended Dec. 31, 1929, net profits of $94,651, after all charges including interest, taxes, etc. This compares with net profits of $272,861 for year ended Dec. 31, 1928.

PROFIT-TAKING COMES WITH NEW RISES

By STANLEY W. PRENOSIL

New York, Feb. 28 (AP)—The stock market continued to creep upward today, although its progress was interrupted now and then by profit-taking and occasional flurries of [illegible] selling.

Gains of 1 to 5 points were again distributed over a fairly broad list, with more than a score of issues, including American Telephone, Radio, Westinghouse Electric and Paramount Famous Lasky, reaching new high ground for the year.

MERGERS ANNOUNCED

There was no change in the character of the business news. More 1929 favorable earnings reports, mostly those of small companies, made their appearance. Sears Roebuck reported a slight gain in sales for the first eight weeks of the year, and an extra dividend of 25 cents was declared on Congress Cigar.

Acquisition of the Fidelity Trust Company by the Marine-Midland Corporation and of the Kraft-Phenix Cheese Co. by the National Dairy Products Co., was announced during the day.

Call money renewed at 4½ per cent, but again dropped to 4 when the supply of funds became so plentiful that the official opening rate was shaded in the outside market. The time money market was quiet with the undertone easier.

No change was announced in the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank rate. The drop of $5,000,000 in federal reserve brokers' loans yesterday was somewhat less than generally expected.

TELEPHONE RUMORS

Coppers displayed a sharp reversal of form in today's market, early declines of 1 to 2 points being replaced by gains of similar extent in the [illegible] Anaconda Copper [illegible] from a low of 71¾ to above 73.

Recent strength of American Telephone, which ran up 3½ points to 241 today, has been accompanied by reports of an early announcement regarding foreign development of sound reproducing devices controlled by the company, as well as by talk of an early issue of stock purchase rights.

International Telephone, which recently acquired a controlling interest in a large German telephone concern, rallied in sympathy.

Farm implement shares made a brisk response to the further recovery in wheat prices. J. I. Case ran up 5 points, and Oliver Farm Equipment convertible preferred and Minneapolis-Moline Plow each advanced more than 3 points.

Office appliance shares also were in brisk demand, International Business Machines and Underwood-Elliott-Fisher showing sharp gains.

Among the many other issues to reach new high ground were Pan American Transportation, Warner Bros. Pictures, North American Co., Best & Co., American International, Remington Rand and United Aircraft.

Simmons, after touching a new low at 62¼, rallied to 64. American Rolling Mills, Gillette Safety Razor, American Bank Note and American Tobacco B also were heavy in the early trading, but most of them made good recovery from the early lows.

Aggressive pool operations brought out considerable short covering in the late trading with resultant advances in many popular issues. Several large blocks were purchased, 10,000 shares of Radio bringing 49⅛, a new 1930 peak.

Otis Elevator jumped 14 points, Westinghouse Electric and Columbian Carbon 6, and American Telephone and North America 4. The close was strong. Sales approximated 3,100,000 shares.

A. & P. REACHES BILLION GOAL

Present indications are that volume of retail business transacted over the counters of the 15,000 "red front" stores of Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. will equal if not exceed the $1,100,000,000 goal set by the company last fall. Fiscal year ends today, Feb. 28. Such a volume would compare with approximately $970,000,000 in the previous fiscal twelve month.

For some years the company has shown net profits approximating 2½ per cent of estimated sales. For the current period this percentage will not run so high due to strong competition. On estimated sales of $970,000,000 in the year ended Feb. 28, 1929, "A & P." showed net earnings of $24,220,982, or 2.5 for every dollar of sales. These earnings were after constructing and equipping of new retail units. They were equal to $11.02 per share on the outstanding common stock after preferred dividends. While net for the year just closed will bulk larger than for Feb., 1929, year it will not reach $27,500,000, the figure which maintenance of the ratio between earnings and sales of recent years would suggest.

The biggest step by "A & P." in recent years was taken last week with the opening of a dozen stores on the Pacific Coast, new territory for this chain, and the final link in the establishment of a coast-to-coast system of retail stores. A year ago A & P. entered the Canadian field.

Florida Needs Co-operation in Its Marketing

Fruit Growers in the South Advised to Observe California

—By B. C. Forbes—

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—A few impressions gathered on a hasty journey through parts of the South:

B. C. Forbes

Hoover's popularity has decreased rather than increased since the South voted for him. It is growingly felt that he has not displayed adequate leadership qualities and that the smooth functioning of our two-party government threatens to disintegrate. The South wonders if a third main political party is aborning. Just about the time the South becomes interested in tariff schedules for self-protection, the ability or disposition of the administration to extend protection is thrown into doubt. Tradition, he assured, isn't holding back any Southern industry from demanding tariff protection.

* * *

General business and agricultural sentiment is only so-so. Cotton's low prices are causing alarm, especially as the textile industry gives no assurance that it will greatly expand consumption either at home or in Europe.

* * *

The South has been afflicted by an uncomfortably large number of bank failures. New York and other big-city newspapers are so accustomed to hundred-million and even billion dollar banks that they pay scant attention to the closing of a bank having a hundred-thousand or a million resources. But when one community after another suddenly finds its local bank has closed its doors the effect is depressing, even paralyzing.

Twenty thousand small banks may or may not be preferable to a relatively few very powerful main institutions having myriads of branches, as in Canada. A banking evolution apparently looms, just as we are passing through an industrial revolution, a mercantile revolution, a transportation revolution—with an agricultural revolution on the horizon.

* * *

One gets very conflicting reports concerning this season's tourist crop. A few enthusiasts declare it has been and is excellent; others call it poor; most call it fair. My own sketchy opinion is that it has been somewhat under rather than over normal—meaning by normal the totals of the last few seasons, although one finds that the South, like Wall Street, is inclined to regard as normal the highest peak ever attained. Says one newspaper:

"The Florida State Chamber of Commerce reports that January saw more than 15,000 foreign-licensed automobiles crossing the St. John's Bridge at Jacksonville. The cars bore more than 40,000 persons, an increase of 48 per cent over the check of 1929, and of 69 per cent over 1928. It is authority for the statement that there are more visitors in Florida at this time than for the past several years."

* * *

One thing the South and most especially Florida needs is a much greater measure of co-operation, particularly in distributing and marketing. Fruit growers could profitably take a leaf out of California's co-operative book. Until they do the industry will fall woefully short of its maximum possibilities. Maybe the energetic Chairman Legge of the Federal Farm Board can persuade fruit growers to evolve order and profit out of chaos and loss.

* * *

Talk of stocks being on the bargain counter following the panic, they have nothing on Florida real estate prices, if the expression may be permitted. The ubiquitous Joseph P. Day, napoleonic real estate auctioneer, is on the job offering the public—according to his arresting advertisements — the choicest of lots at give-away prices. Florida like the stock market will stage a comeback, though the former is likely to move first.

* * *

Colored folks appear to be gradually moving towards higher standards of living. Compared with a quarter of a century ago, they have made noticeable progress taking the race as a whole.

As for the South itself it certainly is rising on the economic scale.

N. E. Telephone to Get Lines in Four More Vt. Counties

New England Telephone Co. has applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to acquire control of White River Valley Telephone Co., operating in four Vermont counties. Price for 1175 shares of 1400 outstanding would be $50 a share, payable in New England Telephone stock.

CURB MARKET ELECTRICAL ISSUES UP

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York, Feb. 28 (AP)—Prices drifted about uncertainly on the Curb market today, as trading turned dull, and speculators were inclined to curtail operations pending such developments as may give the market definite direction. Utilities maintained a fairly firm undertone despite considerable selling, while some of the oils were rather heavy. Industrials were quiet and highly irregular.

A few of the electrical manufacturing issues rose substantially, strong buying appeared in Norma Electric, which sold up more than 2 points to a new high for the year. Jefferson Electric and Radio Products also reached new high ground. Eisler Electric sold up close to the year's best level, but encountered realizing. General Electric of Germany, however, was a soft spot, losing more than 2 points.

Ford Motor, Ltd., was in good demand, in response to declaration of a 10 per cent dividend yesterday. The issue sold above 15 to a new 1930 high. Celanese responded to a favorable 1929 earnings statement with a moderate rise. Air stocks were irregular. Fokker sold moderately higher, while Bellanca sagged. Technicolor fell back a few points.

In the utilities, Electric Bond & Share and American and Foreign Power warrants eased a little in fairly active trading. Sierra Pacific Electric, on the other hand, jumped a few points into new high ground in a small turnover, and Duke Power moved up substantially in a few odd lot sales.

Vacuum was a soft spot in the oils, falling back to 90. Humble sagged moderately. In the mines, Newmont lost a couple of points, then rallied sharply. Investment trusts were dull.

EARNINGS ARE SHOWN GOOD

New York, Feb. 28 (AP)—Corn Products Refining Company, in its report for 1929 made public today, showed net income of $16,309,651, equal to $5.75 a share on the common stock, compared with $13,192,974, or $4.52 a share in 1928.

Net earnings for 1929 of the Mengel Company of Louisville, Ky., manufacturers of wood, fiber and cardboard boxes, amounted to $1,246,171, equal to $3.10 a share on 320,000 no-par common shares, as contrasted with $902,753, or $2.78 a share on 240,000 shares in the preceding year.

Settlement in Fox Dispute Possible

New York, Feb. 28—Differences between William Fox and Halsey, Stuart & Co., which threaten plan for refinancing Fox amusement interests proposed by Lehman Bros., Bancamerica-Blair Corp., and Dillon, Read & Co., are subject of private negotiations. There is possibility of settlement before stockholders' meeting March 5. Because of these conversations, action by Fox for injunction against Halsey, Stuart and American Telephone & Telegraph has been temporarily abandoned.

Safety Razor Corp. Makes Good Report

Report of American Safety Razor Corp. and subsidiaries for year ended Dec. 31, 1929, shows net income of $1,543,266, after depreciation, federal taxes, etc., equivalent to $6.99 a share on 220,789 average number of no-par shares outstanding during the year, and $7.71 a share on 200,000 shares outstanding at close of 1929. This compares with $1,133,583, or $5.44 a share on 208,112 shares of stock outstanding at end of 1928.

DIVIDEND FOR B. & M. NOT HELD BACK

The suit filed by a holder of the old 6 per cent plain preferred stock of Boston & Maine to restrain payment of dividends on the common will not have the effect of holding up the $1 quarterly dividend which will be paid April 1, as declared.

No injunction was issued by the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, before which the case was heard today. The railroad filed a stipulation to the effect that it stands ready to pay such dividends on the preferred stock as the court may decide after answers by the road and hearings thereon.

As Frederick W. Nash, counsel for the Boston & Maine in charge of the case, is leaving for Florida shortly it is unlikely that answers in the suit will be filed right away.

It was the plaintiff's contention that in the years 1925-1926, inclusive, there was accumulated surplus, undivided profits, or other income available for payment of dividends on the preferred stock after payment or setting aside of all accumulated or unpaid dividends on senior preferred issues. The railroad is expected to deny these allegations.

Even if the railroad is beaten, the sum involved is not tremendously large, as full 6 per cent dividends on the preferred stock for the years in question would involve but $755,992.

It should be understood that this 6 per cent stock is non-cumulative, and declaration of dividends was within discretion of directors, although language of the stock certificate says "it is understood that any accumulated surplus, undivided profits or other income which remains available for the payment of the dividend in any year, after the payment or setting aside of all accumulated dividends on the prior preference stock and the first preferred shall be available for and applied to the payment of dividends on the preferred stock as aforesaid, without reference to whether any dividends are paid in that year upon the common stock."

STOCK MARKET REVIEWED

Many stock market authorities believe that the reactionary price tendencies that may occur from time to time in the present stage of the market offer opportunities for additional long-pull commitments, and they emphasize that from the long-pull standpoint little significance should be attached by investors to week-to-week variations in quotations of good common stocks, according to Gage P. Wright, New York economist and president of The Business Economic Digest.

"The movement of averages to a somewhat lower level has practically no unfavorable significance, and our weighted averages of authorities' opinions continues to maintain a bullish position for the long pull. Nevertheless, says Mr. Wright, "the fulfilling to some extent of the expectations of numerous observers to the effect that stock prices should react because they had over-discounted the improvement in business and investment confidence, is likely to relieve the market as a whole from a certain amount of repression.

"The hesitancy and irregularity that has prevailed lately, even through considerable upward progress has been made by prices, constitutes the usual period following a stock decline of major proportions wherein the patience of the investor is likely to be severely tested; he desires to make new commitments yet is constrained in doing so until the outlook is definitely clear. Repeating a statement recently made in the Digest, although it matters little over the longer term whether approved stocks are purchased at a variation of a few points either way, it is the attitude of demanding too positive confirmation of the direction prices are taking that often costs an investor many points' profit.

"The current period of recuperation, it is pointed out, is a particularly appropriate time closely to scrutinize economic trends and changes. Radical and far-reaching transitions affecting investments are taking place today as they have throughout economic history.

"In other words, many investments that perhaps a generation ago could be rated highly conservative have been supplanted by others. Interpreting this for possible advantageous action of a time such as the present, it is meant that one should be willing to make shifts involving temporary paper losses in order reasonably to assure the ultimate desirable goal.

"Thus, investors may assume a position of moving with the economic current instead of against it: no tangible trend is so inconsequential as not to warrant evaluation as a possible influencing factor."

FOREIGN MONEY SLUMP HURTS EXCHANGE

By W. S. COUSINS

Paralleling the reactionary movements in the grain, cotton, commodity and security markets in recent weeks has been the slump in French, Japanese, British and Spanish currencies in our exchange markets.

Provided that American business leaders are desirous of continuing their import and export trade with foreign markets and taking for granted that fundamental conditions in the countries referred to are sound, the necessity arises of offering some form of co-operation, either in stabilizing the exchanges or in arranging some other form of payment for European obligations to American individuals and firms.

It goes without saying that if the French, English and Spanish merchants do not wish to pay in their own depreciated currencies they can ship gold to this country. Gold has a standard valuation, no matter what may be stamped upon its face as a coin of this or any other country, and a box or two of gold coin or bars will go a long way to settling up a debt between individuals in widely separated spots on the earth's surface.

GOLD PLENTIFUL HERE.

The question of gold imports from Europe at this time raises a host of academic questions, related principally to gold reserves, gold supply and economic adjustments of one kind or another. Since the war the United States, its reserve system and its large commercial banks have acted as the reservoirs and custodians of more than half of the world's gold supply. Though a good part of the yellow metal has been exported, we still have more than we need.

It is the general impression that in any country in which the gold supply is superabundant, that is, larger than the amount actually needed to support the bank credit and currency structure, too much credit will be injected into the financial markets, interest rates will fall, speculation increase, commodity prices swell up and an unwarranted boom in business will be ushered in.

The argument springs from the same source as that which deduces that those who have a pocketful of money are most likely to be the most liberal spenders. The proverbial "drunken sailor" is presumed to have just received a wad of money, representing three or four months' back pay, in order to launch him fairly on his widely heralded spending spree, and a whole nation occasionally goes off on such a spree.

GOLD IMPORTS NOT NEEDED.

Therefore, we are not favorably disposed to witnessing a flood of gold from the Old World to the New. At the beginning of 1930 this country had 38 per cent of the combined gold holdings of all the central banks and governments in the world. Even since the World War our gold reserves have been larger than required to support our currency and banking structure, though, due to expert handling by the reserve bank heads, the extra gold has not been made the basis of dangerous inflation of the drunken sailor variety.

By reducing interest rates at home, or by enlarging their borrowing from Americans, the European bankers and business leaders could bring about the same effect as by the shipment of gold to this country. The interest rate matter affects them alone, but in the question of further borrowing, the resources and attitude of Americans would have to be considered.

BUSINESS SLUMPS HURT

Theoretically, at least, the best risk in the business world is the man who pays his bills promptly and gives evidence of a strong, though not necessarily liquid, financial position. Other factors enter in, one being the desirability of continuing the business relations that are currently in effect. On that basis, many of the European countries have always stood on a high plane, but the slumps in business in important foreign centers in recent months, the increase of unemployment and the falling off of purchasing power of wide territories make the prospect of further loans an uninviting one.

A few sidelights on the situation include the declining volume of tourists' expenditures in Europe, which is directly traceable to the greedy tactics of the hotelmen and the embarrassment caused to visitors by passports, tariffs, identification, etc.; the increase of European purchases of American securities and the organization of the Bank for International Settlements, through which the reparation payments will in future be made.

CONVERTIBLES OF TELEPHONE AT 1930 TOP

By JOHN L. COOLEY

New York, Feb. 28 (AP)—Increasing confidence, supported by an easier tone in the money markets, extended bond trading today. The list was thin in spots, but high-grade issues in the early dealings gave evidence of further ability to strengthen their positions on the appearance of buying orders.

The feature of the market was the heavy accumulation of American Telephone convertible 4½s, which equalled their 1930 high of 160 for an advance of about 3 points. International Telephone 4½s were up a point, but were sluggish.

Wickwire Spencer Steel convertible 7s, which had a sharp rise recently, gained 1.

Trading in domestic bonds of seasoned types found few important fluctuations. New Haven 3½s of 1954 and 1956 rallied from 1½ to 2½ points. Northern Pacific General changed hands in fair volume, remaining steady. St. Louis & Southwestern 5s rose 1½.

Baltimore & Ohio gold 4s, Canadian National 4½s of 1955, Central Pacific 5s and St. Louis-San Francisco prior lien 4s were among the firm carriers.

Utilities and industrials moved quietly. American Writing Paper 6s improved 3 points to the new year's high of 82. Parmelee Transportation 6s rose 1 and Public Service Electric & Gas 4½s about the same amount.

The demand for French bonds was not quite so keen as in other sessions this week, but it remained sufficient to bring small gains to the Republic 7½s and the municipals. Foreign bonds were generally firm.

United States Governments were quiet in the earlier hours. One $100,000 block of Liberty 3½s sold at 99.18, unchanged.

New offerings included a $6,000,000 issue of Arkansas Power & Light Co. first 5s, due 1956, at 94½, a $5,000,000 issue of Province of Nova Scotia 30-year non-callable 5s at par, and the City of Detroit's $15,500,000 block of 4.30 per cent tax anticipation warrants, yielding 4.15.

COTTON PRICES ARE STEADY

New York, Feb. 28—Cotton started steady at a decline of 2 to 6 points today under realizing promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables and a feeling that the technical position had eased somewhat on the recent advance of about $3.00 per bale.

May sold off to 15.16 and October to 15.83, but the offerings were not heavy, and prices steadied later on a renewal of covering and trade buying.

May soon recovered to 15.53 and October to 15.94, making net advances of 1 to 3 points with the market comparatively quiet.

Liverpool cables said that some Continental and Bombay buying in that market had been supplied by local and London realizing and reported moderate sales of cotton cloth to Africa and South America but said yarns were dull with stocks burdensome.

Oil Curtailment Effective March 1

Statewide oil curtailment will go into effect March 1 in California, with exception of Midway-Sunset field. Daily average crude oil production, now in excess of 700,000 barrels, will be reduced to 619,000, according to P. N. Boggs, general committee chairman.

CENTRAL AND B. & O. PACT DISSOLVED

Washington, Feb. 28 (INS)—An agreement between the Baltimore & Ohio and New York Central railroads for joint control of the Reading system is no longer in existence.

This fact was brought out today in a brief filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission by the B. & O. in support of its application for authority to acquire control of the Buffalo & Susquehanna Railroad. No details as to the abrogation of the agreement were brought out in the brief.

The understanding between the B. & O. and the New York Central was that each could hold 25 per cent of the Reading stock.

Whether the Central's holdings have increased in proportion to those of the B. & O. was not announced. The inference is, however, that the B. & O. now holds the largest share.

League of Nations and League's Works Are None of Our Business!

THE Kansas City Star in a fine editorial, "Ten Years of the League," reviews the reasons why it is fortunate we did not join the League of Nations and says:

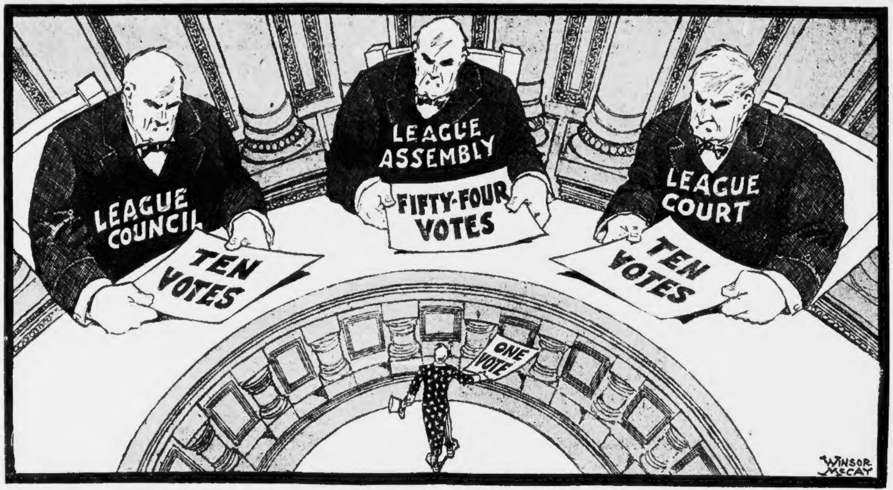
When he submitted the League covenant to the peace conference in Paris, President Wilson declared:

> "ARMED FORCE IS IN THE BACKGROUND OF THIS PROGRAMME, BUT IT IS IN THE BACKGROUND, AND IF THE MORAL FORCE OF THE WORLD WILL NOT SUFFICE, THE PHYSICAL FORCE OF THE WORLD SHALL."

The covenant is filled with provisions for the use of "sanctions" (blockades) and joint land, sea and air forces. Among other things, the League's police powers were pledged to protect the boundaries of every member and to perpetuate the new frontiers established by the peace treaties, without reference to their justice. This whole arrangement was utterly repugnant to the American theory of avoiding military alliances and of basing peace upon enlightened opinion, rather than upon the threat of war.

Had this country joined the League under those conditions, America would have been untrue to its best national traditions. It might be argued that, as a member, we could have worked to change these provisions. But it is indisputable that, having never compromised with our principles even in appearance, we have compelled the League to hold its police powers in suspension.

ALONE, AND AT THEIR MERCY!



The fact is that the first decade of the League's existence has shown how wise has been our decision not to join. Outside the League we have been a far more potent force for progress than ever we should have been inside. Our independence is a constant check upon any attempt to build the League into a superstate. The reasons that impelled us to stay out of the League years ago are still valid.

The Kansas City Star is right.

The reasons which impelled us to stay out of the League are precisely the ones that should impel us to stay out of the League's Court.

There is "ultimate force" back of decisions of the League Court. Like the political section of the League, the Court is preoccupied with European affairs, boundary questions, settlement of bitternesses left by the Versailles Peace Treaty—the sure breeder of future European wars. In the League's Assembly, we should be outvoted 54 to 1, in the League's Council, 10 to 1; in the League's Court, 10 to 1.

Why they want us in European organizations such as the League and the League Court is clearly indicated at the Disarmament Conference. There they have spent their time urging us to strip our navy, join in putting "teeth" into the Kellogg Pact, agreeing to participate in the League's blockades, and the like.

The Kansas City Star is right. We don't belong in the political department of the League—the Assembly and Council. We don't belong in the finance department of the League, the International Bank. We don't belong in the legal department of the League, the League Court.

The Kansas City Star speaks for the people of the country when it says that the League and the League's work are none of our business and we shall join them at our peril.

NEWS for you who want to fly but can't afford to. The Fokker Aircraft Corporation will sell planes on credit—one-third cash, balance in twelve equal instalments, insurance paid.

Other producers—some of whom don't know it yet—will follow suit.

Flying lessons will also be included in the cost of planes. Builders of Waco aircraft offer them now. Their slogan, "Buy our plane and we will teach you how to fly," soon will be the rule of the industry, as your auto dealer now teaches you how to drive.

Aviation, you might say, is getting down to bedrock.

Instalment buying, appealing to those who want their "personal" planes, will appeal more to those interested in air transport as a business. A Fokker costing $21,800 requires about $7000 cash to finance. A fraction of the earnings on it should meet the monthly instalments.

Ambitious young men with a little capital will seriously consider aviation for profit. They will do most of their flying at a desk, where the money is made.

Desks are where automobile money is made, and railroad money, and all other money.

Anybody can pilot a flying machine. You should learn, as you learned to drive. It's convenient.

Fewer can pilot a flying business. If you think you can, try. Aviation is very much of a business, with flying merely an incident of it.

"Thar's gold in them clouds, boys"—for those that keep their feet on the ground.

Our National Flower

It's Wild

(Copyright, 1930)

AMERICA learned the other day that its national flower was the wild rose.

It was news to some of us, who had wondered if it wasn't the blossom of the raspberry. But more than a million votes were rolled up to prove it, and a million American voters can't be wrong. Not on this subject.

The wild rose carried every state but Colorado, Florida, Minnesota and Washington. The columbine was a bad second. The violet and goldenrod did not place. The dogwood, daisy and mountain laurel also ran.

Some super-patriots opposed the wild rose on the ground that it was England's national flower, and hence unworthy of the land of the free. They withdrew their objections when informed that the English rose was "cultivated."

Words of the Wise Men

Weakness on both sides is, as we know, the motto of all quarrels.
—Voltaire.

The man who builds, and wants wherewith to pay,
Provides a home from which to run away. —Young.

Of all the paths that lead to woman's love
Pity's the straightest.
—Beaumont and Fletcher.

A man must indeed be a hero to appear such in the eyes of his valet. —Catinat.

No one possesses unalloyed pleasure; there is some anxiety mingled with joy. —Ovid.

True happiness is in no sport confined,
If you preserve a firm and constant mind. —Wynne.

Principle is ever my motto, not expediency. —Disraeli.

Los Angeles: Intoxicated driver is freed by court when his lawyer proves that you've got to be drunk to drive a car on Sundays and holidays.

Miami: Sparring partner smacks Jack Sharkey on chin and is suspended for conduct unbecoming a gentleman.

Washington: With million men jobless Congressmen vote to take import duty off tinsel for Christmas trees.

H. G. Wells Writes on "The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and Geo. P. Wells

H. G. Wells

THE lichens are the classical example of biological phenomenon known as symbiosis. This term (which is Greek for "living together") is applied to cases when two organisms of different kinds live in intimate union and to the benefit of both. In the lichen, as we have seen, both the alga and the fungus derive some benefit from their union, although the fungus is the active member in bringing it about and certainly profits most.

It is interesting to find that lichens can be divided into two groups, each derived from a different fungus type. The two groups must have taken to domesticating green algae quite independently of each other. There are other cases where single-celled algae are captured and domesticated in this manner by plants, and even by animals.

A characteristic feature of radiolaria, for example, is the presence in their bodies of tiny lobular "yellow-cells." These cells are algae, entangled and held in the protoplasm of the radiolarian; they can survive the death of their host and live and multiply independently.

Here, again, the radiolarian benefits by the synthetic powers of the algae, and the algae benefit by being protected. There are similar organisms in other protozoa, and even in the tissues of certain many-celled animals.

Some species of the common fresh water polyp hydra are colored in brilliant green by plant cells in their tissues, and nearly all corals have yellowish algae in the inner layers of their bodies and apparently cannot live without them. And there are flat worms and sponges which do the same thing.

This relationship provides an amusing armchair speculation. Should the algae in a radiolarian, say, be called part of the organism or not?

Pro: They are apparently indispensable to the organism, an integral part of his body.

Con: They can survive his death and lead happy, active lives of their own. The triplex author leaves this nice question unanswered: he states the facts and leaves the interpretation to his reader.

6. Slime-Moulds

WE come now to an exceedingly curious group of creatures lying on the broad frontier between the animal and vegetable kingdoms—a group of creatures of no importance whatever to the practical man, but of the utmost philosophical and scientific interest, common enough, sometimes even conspicuous, and yet hardly ever noticed except by naturalists.

For most of its life a slime-mould (the technical name of the group is either Myxomycetes, meaning Slime-fungi, or Mycetozoa, meaning fungus-animals) is a naked, slimy mass of protoplasm, and a most formless mass without cells or special tissues. Its appearance varies from species to species.

It may be translucent, or white, or pink, or green, or yellow, or purple; it is usually large enough to be easily seen, and in extreme cases such as the bright yellow "flowers of tan" it may be as much as a foot square and two inches thick—one can fill a bucket with this formless creature.

It is found in such situations as decaying logs, old tree stumps, heaps of rotting dead leaves, and the like. Usually it is spread out as a thin, creeping film of living substance without enduring shape. It is nearly as structureless as a dropped egg.

To the naked eye it presents a veined pattern, having a network of thickened strands connected together by thin films in the meshes.

Seen through the microscope, it is a simple sheet of protoplasm without nerves or muscles or digestive organs or any such specialized parts—not even divided up into cells. It is dotted with thousands of nuclei and contractile vacuoles; the protoplasm consists like the protoplasm of an amoeba of a clear outer layer and a granular inner mass. The creature is in fact like a gigantic amoeba.

The substance of this plasmodium, as the large, creeping stage in the life history of a slime-mould is called, is in continual sluggish motion. It ebbs slowly hither and thither, often with a regular rhythmic motion, flowing in one direction for a minute or two and then reversing.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

COURAGE is the candle
I must keep alight
Through the deepening darkness
Of the night.
I must keep it burning
With a steady flame,
As a white star ever
Shines the same.
I must watch it closely
Lest it flicker out,
Blown by some assailing
Wind of doubt.
Courage is the candle
God put in my hand;
I must guard it more than
Love or land.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Feb. 28—Thoughts while strolling: Whatever became of Turkish Corners. The original Beefsteak Charlie. Not so many window displays of cocktail shakers and flasks. The self-consciousness of a lone passenger on an escalator. So many colored maids named Nettie. Karl E. Harriman and Frank Craven look alike.

Those out yonder lads who visit New York several times a year. And are known back home as One of the Boys. Neysa McMien, a Quincy Ill., girl who made good in the city. Sour, beery smell from speak-easies. Alan Dwan's double who is a well-known head waiter.

Who remembers when a neighbor came over to borrow a buckwheat "starter?" Old time shop keepers who still sweep their own sidewalk fronts. Soft and sulky ladies who sit in hotel waiting rooms. Percy Crosby is also a window shopper. Dick Berlin and his mother. Hope Williams' swagger.

Raymond Duncan, Isadora's brother, and his long gray locks and sandals. The display of foreign periodicals on the Bryant Park corner. George McManus, the acquitted Rothstein prospect, and his Page One smile. The chestnut vendor with little cart and blind pony.

Half-dollar tie sales. Bargains in harmonicas. Dollar dog baths. Three penny arcades in a block, and all flourishing. Delegates who wear huge badges and eat in automats. Old actors in frayed spats clutching at frozen dreams. Bugs Baer and Damon Runyon. Whatever became of rat terriers?

Those clubs upholstered in stiff leather. Where members tip-toe about. Saving bank sign: "Save your first thousand and you are made." The rakish dip to J. P. McEvoy's hat. And the indefinable chic of salesladies in the dressmaking establishments. Alice, Ziegfeld's celebrated telephone operator.

The cafe that excludes women and where men may light pipes. A ditch digger bursts forth in an aria from "Faust." Two young girls assist a teetering old gray head into a taxi. Blow him a farewell kiss—and turn quickly to giggle. C'est la vie!

The largest bathroom in New York is under construction in a new apartment building on upper Park ave. for a prosperous bachelor. It is 32 feet long and 24 feet wide. The bath itself is a pool gradually reaching a depth of five feet. There are four different booths for various showers and sprays and a violet ray cabinet. Complete, it cost $36,000. The owner came to New York 12 years ago as a $25-a-week stenographer.

The Woolworth building no longer the tallest structure, continues to attract more attention than any skyscraper in town. The Woolworth was erected about 17 years ago, and it has been estimated 500 daily visit the observation tower. The edifice has a sentimental attachment for outlanders. They perhaps feel that if it were not for the five and tens in their town there would be no gigantic monument of this sort in New York.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

By ELSIE ROBINSON

A YOUNG mother writes:

"We're having a dispute in our family and I wish you would give your opinion. My husband's people, who are college graduates, feel that I should have more interests outside my home. They are advising me to attend certain lectures and take a correspondence course. I realize how fine this would be and I wish I could do it, but I feel that I haven't any right to indulge such personal ambitions when my babies are so little, just two and five. I may be wrong, but I feel that a good mother's interests should center in her babies, home and husband. I find that if I swing the home, keeping everything pleasant for Harry, do a little entertaining and, above all, keep in sympathy with my children's and Harry's interests, I have a full-sized job without trying to develop my own individuality."

Elsie Robinson

That's a fine statement. You want to cheer such devotion . . . so do I. And yet, unless she changes that attitude, she is headed straight for tragedy! For, beautiful is her ideal is, it isn't sufficient for successful motherhood and a wifehood in the year 1930.

Time was when a married woman fulfilled her every duty if she was a competent cook, nurse, seamstress, housekeeper and loving, self-sacrificing attendant. But much more than that is necessary now, for our whole scheme of life has changed.

Life is no longer a standardized performance to be repeated generation after generation. Homes are no longer hideaways. Life has become a challenging, ever-changing adventure. It is not enough for a woman to keep her husband and children happy and healthy in the home. She must keep them hustling outside the home. She must stir them up and stimulate them, excite and inspire them . . . be a magnet and a challenge herself.

But she will need much more than love and domestic science to qualify her for that task.

The greatest and most necessary gift which a modern woman can give to her family is the gift of herself—the quickening of her own vital spirit. But she must have a self before she can give it. And she can't acquire that self by having "no interest outside the home." Her heart may center in the home, but her mind must range or those she loves will soon outgrow her ministrations.

The married woman of 1930 must be a real person as well as a wife and mother. She must have ideas and interests and adventures quite apart from her family's—else she is little better than an affectionate incubator.

Wretched women often write to this department complaining that their families have drifted away from them after years of devoted drudgery. They can't understand such "ingratitude" and their confusion is pathetic.

"I just lived for them . . . I never gave a thought to myself!" they cry, not knowing—poor souls—that therein lies the reason for their tragedy.

If you don't give a thought to yourself the rest of the world will soon cease to give a thought to you. For, in spite of all the love you may lavish and all the chores you may do, you won't be worth giving a thought to.

All of which seems very hard boiled as applied to mothers. But why shouldn't mothers be expected to qualify as well as any other class of professionals?
